RICHIBUCTO, N. B. JUNE 13, 1901

A CARNIVAL OF CRIME.

The arrest of five young men in St. John in the past fortnight on the serious charge of indecent assault on little girls—mere children in fact—and the conviction of four of these would seem to indicate a very serious state of morality in the commercial metropolis of New Brunswick. All of these cases were separate and distinct and followed closely on the conviction and sentence of another criminal on a similar charge. So many instances of this unnatural crime at one time would seem to indicate one of two things, either that such crimes are of more common occurrence in New Brunswick than the criminal records would indicate or else that the exposure of unnatural crimes leads to the commission of similar offences. In other words, there must be many such outrages being perpetrated with impunity in seemingly moral communities or else crimes are epidemic in their nature, and each criminal scourge runs its full course before being replaced by some other criminal epidemic of a different form. Perhaps both these things are true.

We do not imply that St. John is possessed of a larger proportion of the criminal class than the average, for while it is undoubtedly true that the vicious and the depraved naturally gravitate to the cities, yet for a seaport town, St. John has been remarkably free from serious crimes. We are rather inclined to the opinion that while the world may be getting better in many ways, that the prevalence of unnatural crimes is on the increase. Whether this is due, as might be suggested from the certificate of a prominent St. John physician in one of the cases to which reference has been made, to the enteebling of the minds of young men by the use of liquors and cigarettes, may perhaps be worthy of consideration. The use of liquor is not appreciably increasing and so far as can be judged is rather declining so that it would seem that of the two evils, these serious and unnatural crimes must be laid at the door of the cigarette habit. The use of cigarettes has a modern evil and one that has absolutely nothing to recommend it. It would almost appear to be necessary to prohibit the sale of the deadly cigarette for the same reason that opium is placed under the ban.

If these crimes had been committed in the Southern States by coloured men they would have been promptly lynched. If the perpetrators had been blacks, the good people of St. John would have demanded the infliction of southern justice upon them and a hue and cry would have been raised that would have probably resulted in a race riot. As they were merely white brutes they get two years in jail with a few lashes, and the one of most respectable connection is let off scot free on condition that he exile himself from St. John for two years. Rather hard this seems to be on the community to which he is exiled, which unable to protect itself against a man pronounced to be of insane criminal propensities will likely be forced to suffer from his ravages before it can place him behind the bars. The conviction of one of the criminals for a second offence would seem to indicate that justice was surely blind when it turned this other criminal loose on some other town or district, and thus enabled him to commit fresh deprivations.

AN ENDURING PROSPERITY.

The advent of liberal administrators in 1896 and the introduction of a liberal trade policy into Canada's commercial life brought the good times which would seem the natural experience of a young and wealthy nation but for which the people of this Dominion had for years previous sighed in vain. The change was at first vehemently denied by the purlined politicians who had for years muddled the national affairs and the country has scarcely ceased laughing at that famous prophecy of ruin with which the conservative seer, Sir Charles Tupper, greeted the introduction of the Fielding tariff. "The ruin, the deplorable ruin of Canadian industries" which Sir Charles beheld with prophetic vision came in the shape of more work and better prices so that in four years the trade of the country increased $142,000,000. The only industry ruined was the trade of professional politicians and the Tupper, Foster, Haggart and other conservative patriots have been out of a job ever since.

When it became too apparent for contradiction that prosperity had really come as a new experience in Canadian life, the cry of negation was changed to one of self laudation to account for the change. I discovered America, said Sir Charles, likewise I am the father of Confederation, and Mr. Foster fearing to be shut out of the game altogether, claimed to be at least the step-father of the National Policy. And the people smiled and cared not whose offspring the new prosperity might be so long as they could all adopt it for their own. As year by year has passed, it has brought a continuance of national development and a renewal of national confidence in the future.

The Hon. W. S. Fielding noting the rapid development and the renewed hope, last session of Parliament with a proper prudence urged the business interests against an overconfidence natural to the remarkable prosperity which Canada had enjoyed for the past five years. Our conservative friends stopped claiming the prosperity and exultingly announced that they had known all along that the good times were only due to a natural cycle which apparently revolved like the earth on its orbit and brought good times and bad in epidemic form once every five years. With a confidence worthy of admiration these soothsayers proceeded to demonstrate the correctness of the theory from which they claimed had been the experience in the various five year cycles of the Conservative period in Canada. And the people were too busy to take much notice of the absurdity but smiled and thought that if the theory were correct, someone in charge must have forgotten to put on the brakes in time to stop the revolving trade orbit at the good times period for eighteen long years, for the people of keenest memory could only remember recurring cycles of hard times from 1878 to 1896, each cycle of time a trifle harder than its predecessor.

Again the conservative prophets spoke too quickly. The good times are not ended. The financial statement of Canada for the past 11 months to the end of May show a marked advance in national revenue and a greater surplus than ever. The administration this year will on the 30th of this month be able to show a year's record of splendid achievement. The revenue is sufficient to pay all the capital charges as well as all the ordinary expenditure, so that although over eight million dollars has been spent on permanent works and improvements, not a dollar will be added to the national debt, but a neat surplus will pass instead to the country's credit. It is little wonder that Mr. W. F. McLean, M. P., one of the prominent Ontario conservative leaders, editor and proprietor of the Toronto World, sums up the situation with the pithy remark, "The Conservative party is on the rocks."

And in spite of this political calamity the people of Canada continue to smile at their pleasant experience under liberal administration.

CHEATED THE LAW.

TORONTO BANK ROBBER COMMITTED SUICIDE BY JUMPING FROM TWO STORY BALCONY.

TORONTO, June 7.—Rice and Rutledge, convicted of robbery of bank and post office at Aurora, were to-day sentenced to 21 years in the penitentiary. Both of them were then arraigned for the murder of constable Boyd. The evidence of constable Stewart was taken and the case adjourned for a week. The prisoners were returned to the jail. Rutledge, while on his way to dinner, jumped from the second story of the corridor, and landed thirty feet below. His skull was crushed in and he died a few hours later. It was evidently a case of deliberate suicide. Rice, the remaining prisoner, the most desperate of the trio has been manacled hand and foot and will be watched day and night by an extra guard.

Rice, who fired the fatal shot, seems to be an all-round criminal. He is supposed to have killed a man during a robbery in Chicago. The following is his police record, as given out by Crown Attorney Curry:—"The appearance of the prisoner, Fred Lee Rice does not give any indication of the extent of his criminal career. His home is in Champaign, Ill., where it was strongly suspected that he was implicated in two bank robberies at Tolono and Arthur, not far from Champaign. He appears to have begun his criminal career by running away from home after having forged his father's name for $500. After this he went to South America, and was gone several months. One of his next escapades was to forge his uncle's name for $1,000 at the Champaign National Bank. He turned up later in Colorado where he again forged a man's name and was sent to the penitentiary for three years. He served nearly the full term in penitentiary of Canon City, Colorado, and was out about seven months when the gang made their appearance at Toronto. One of his misdeeds, for which he was never prosecuted, was connected with the purchase of stock, having got his father to purchase a lot of stock of the Phoenix Telephone Company. Rice afterwards sold about $12,500 of it for Indiana land, and then traded the land off for a house in Decatur. It turned out afterwards that the house was mortgaged for more than it was worth, so that his father lost the $12,500.

THREE KILLED IN A WEEK.

SYDNEY, June 9.—Archibald Russell, of Conception Bay, Nfld., was instantly killed on Saturday afternoon at the construction works of the heat furnace by a block and tackle striking him on the head. A pathetic incident connected with Russell's death is the fact that on that day his father arrived from Newfoundland to visit him. Arriving at the gates he was not allowed in and remained outside all the afternoon, awaiting the appearance of his son. This accident makes three killed since last Sunday—Hamilton, Moxham, and Russell. It is estimated that over 100 have been killed and injured at the works of the steel company since they began operations here.

PARIS, June 8.—The duel with swords, which was begun yesterday in the Parc des Princes between Max Regis, and anti-Semite Mayor of Algiers, and M. Laberdusque, an Algerian journalist, and which was adjourned after nineteen resultless rounds had been fought, was resumed this morning. M. Regis was seriously wounded in the forearm, a copious flow of blood resulting, and the duel was thereupon stopped. The seconds, however subsequently became involved in a lively altercation, which will possibly lead to another duel.

older than you are?

Why let all your neighbors and friends think you must be twenty years older than you are? Yet it's impossible to look young with the color of 70 years in the hair. It's sad to see young persons look prematurely old in this way. Sad because it's all unnecessary; for gray hair may always be restored to its natural color by using

OTTAWA, June 9.—The steamer James, of Rideau Lakes Navigation Co., took fire last night here. One of the crew, Robert Ireland, was burned to death. Three others, John Miller, Thomas Sykes and Richard Dunn are in the hospital suffering from burns. The steamer was damaged to about $3,000. Ireland leaves a wife and two children.

MINE DISASTER IN PENNSYLVANIA.

PORT ROYAL, June 11.—The Pittsburg Coal & Coke Co.'s shaft No. 2 at this place is on fire and over 30 men are in the mines, many of whom it is feared will never be heard from again. It is thought the fire started from an explosion. Supt. Wm. McCune and several other boys with about 20 men went down shaft No. 1 and have not been heard from since. About three hours after the rescue party had been in the mine two explosions were heard.

PORT ROYAL, June 11.—All the rescuing parties have come out of the burning mine. They say the black damp makes work impossible and they give up all hopes of finding any of the missing alive. Twenty men are known to be missing (and are supposed dead). They are: Frank Davenport, Antonio Stikel, John Peebles, Jeremiah Daly, Wm. McCune, superintendent of six mines of the Pittsburg Coal Company, between West Newton and Eureka; Wm. Amison, superintendent of several mines below West Newton; Denis Wardley, pit boss; of the Port Royal mines; Michael Roy, pit boss of the Euclid mines; John Keck, pit boss of the Darr mines; Peter McCaot, boss driver; Port Royal mine; Bernard Balland; unknown. The injured brought out are:—Hurst Smith, pit boss, Smithton mines, both eyes destroyed and fatally burned; Harry Beveridge, machinist, both arms broken and fatally burned.

A PREVIOUS DISASTROUS EXPLOSION.

Seven years ago there was another disastrous explosion at the Port Royal, and the mine caught fire. It was necessary to fill it with water which finally quenched the flames. To do this a hole was drilled from the bed of the river. This is now closed by a plug which was arranged for such an emergency as the present, and to drown out the fire all that is necessary is to take out the plug and the water of the Youghiogheny will rush in. This cannot be resorted to until all the men in the mine have been recovered or are known to be beyond rescue.

THE GLASS OF FASHION.

Sashes of all kinds and descriptions will be a feature of summer dress.

The prettiest, most becoming face veil for mourning wear is made of brussels net with a scalloped edge, a hemstitched border or a crape band.

Embroidered batiste of the finest texture and the daintiest biscuit tint is to be very much worn this season for entire gowns, waists and trimmings.

French knots are quite as popular as ever as a means of trimming, with the difference of using heavy instead of fine silk. On gauze materials they are very effective.

Spring hats have blossomed out in a very realistic way with flowers in the lead for decoration. Roses are first on the list, but all sorts of exquisite floral designs are in evidence on the new hats.

The new leather belts are the same straight around bands so long worn, but are covered with rows of stitching or combined with velvet showing a narrow line through the center, the leather overlapping and being stitched on.

Single faced velvet ribbon is promised as one of the trimmings for foulard gowns, and it is to be stitched on at the upper edge. Graduated bands of piece velvet were stitched on to the skirts of the winter models, so it is only the same idea differently expressed.

A Historic Throne.

The biggest episcopal throne in Europe is at the Exeter cathedral. Composed of the very best oak, with magnificent carving executed by the most expert designers of the day, the throne soars upward in beautiful tapering pinnacles, which rise up to the lofty roof of the sacred edifice. The throne is not only the biggest, but one of the oldest. It was saved from destruction by the Puritans by the ingenuity of the Cavaliers, who when the Roundheads marched on Exeter pulled down the throne and divided it into 365 pieces, one for every day of the year. The pieces were safely secured in many hiding places, and when peace was restored the pieces were put together again without the aid of a single nail.

A Wily Answer.

The shah of Persia once asked a group of his courtiers whom they thought the greater man, himself or his father. At first he could get no reply to so dangerous a question, the answer to which might cost the courtiers their heads.

At last a wily old courtier said, "Your father, sire, for although you are equal to your father in all other respects in this he is superior to you, that he had a greater son than any you have."

NOT UP TO SNUFF.

"Harold," murmured the beautiful maiden shyly, "am I the only girl to whom you ever told your love?"

"I will tell you the truth at last," answered the manly youth, leaning fondly over her. "You are not."

"Well, I think you might have lied a little, Harold, for my sake," she said, turning tearfully away.—Tit-Bits.
