CANADIAN LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., U. S. A., July 7, 1901.—The blistering heat that has prevailed all over the United States for the past week and more, has had the effect of driving thousands north to the cool lakes and rivers of Canada. The tide of travel, which had already set northward with record breaking strength, has been so strengthened that it has taken the ability of the railways to accommodate it. The habit of going to Canada for the heated season is steadily growing, the cost of the trip being more than offset by the greater cheapness of living and overweighted in any case by the far greater coolness. Washington, in particular, is deserted, at least one-third of the wealthy residents of the fashionable Northwest section having closed their homes and gone north. Most of the foreign legations have gone to Newport, R. I., the British charge d'affaires, Mr. Gerard Lowther, and the entire staff of the embassy having left a few days ago for that point, where the embassy will be located throughout the summer and fall. Most of the important questions, particularly those relating to China and to the isthmian canal, are in such condition that the business can be transacted without the necessity of the personal presence of the officials here.

The flag episode at Skaguay has been laughed out of court. The Acting Secretary of State declares that the only thing to be done is to arrest and fine Mr. Miller (who hauled down the Canadian customs flag) for disorderly conduct, while the Canadian authorities, it is said, have sent instructions to their Superintendent not to raise it again. The whole thing is only a tempest in a tea-pot and would have less even than the little significance it has, were it not that it shows a somewhat bitter feeling to prevail between Americans and Canadians along the Alaskan boundary.

Consul General Stowe at Cape Town, South Africa, finds upon investigation that there is no reason why the British government should prohibit the use of American meats for army purposes. On this subject he says in a report to the State department: "As the great bulk of tinned meat bought by the military authorities of Great Britain has been sent to Cape Town, I have been making investigations with a view of finding if objections have been made to American product. I obtained permission for an American who was proceeding to Johannesburg to stop at the different military bases and make inquiries. I give the substance of his report below:

"Thousands of empty tins which have contained American beef are strewn throughout the entire route to Pretoria. The percentage of Australian is small; I should think less than 5 per cent of the whole. At De Aar, Bloemfontein, Kroonstadt, and lesser bases large stores of American corned beef are to be seen. The men, when questioned, stated that it is quite satisfactory, and I was informed by several officers that in many cases the men preferred tinned meat to the poorer fresh article.

"There is a large stock of American meat at Pretoria. All the stores and shops carry it, and have had no complaints as to its quality. I have ascertained that it is the custom at the bases to use cases of corned beef as floors, putting a layer of cases on the ground and piling thereon flour, meal, or other commodities which it is desired to protect from moisture. These cases are often so used for several months before being sent out as rations, and the tins become rusty and small holes let in the air, thus spoiling the meat, although the tin is not blown. This, in my opinion, is the principal cause of complaint."

"The importation of frozen meat is in the hands of the De Beers company, which has erected several substantial depots and installed ice making machinery, imported from the United States, thus reducing the price of frozen meats to the consumer. It also imported refrigerator cars for transmitting meat up country. The company now proposed to import from Australia frozen hog products, hams, shoulders, and bacon, and to cure these after arrival."

G. W. Oubridge, of a famous produce firm in Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, is one of those progressive Englishmen who believe in seeing for themselves how things are done on this side of the ocean. A short time ago Mr. Oubridge's son and heir reached man's estate, and his father determined that the best thing he could do to complete his boy's business education was to bring him over to this side to see American business methods. The father and son are now in this city, where they will stay several days. "We were up in Canada," said the elder Mr. Oubridge, "and visited the great cheese manufacturing places up there. Then we came to the United States, and going to Indianapolis called at Kingan's great packing house, with which we do considerable business. It is my first visit to this side, and while my son is getting some ideas, I am getting many myself. The facilities for doing business in all lines in this country are, of course, marvelous, and there is much to learn."

Consul General Turner reports to the State Department from Ottawa on the search for petroleum which has been made and is still being made in that locality. He says that while no positive results have not been reached, yet the signs are favorable and it is believed that oil will be found at a greater depth than has yet been attained. A well is now being bored which is 540 feet down; oil is expected to be struck at about 900 feet from the surface—that is, at 700 feet below the rock, at the contact of the Trenton limestone with the Utica shale. In Ohio and Indiana, it has been found at that horizon. What is required now is a thorough equipment of drills to properly test the basin. If the experiments succeed a new and important commercial revival is expected in that region.

ONLY A LITTLE BACKACHE.

This is the first unmistakable symptom of diseased kidneys, an ailment which no one can neglect without inviting Bright's disease, diabetes, rheumatism and the most painful and fatal maladies. At the first sign of backache and urinary disorders use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and you can be certain of prompt relief and cure. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box.

A TEDIOUS PERFORMANCE.

"Uncle Jerry," asked his down town relative, "how do you like your vermicelli soup?" "The soup's good enough," replied Uncle Jerry from beyond the suburbs, "but it's a lot of bother to have to take out all these strings."

Cook's Penetrating Plaster.

LONDON, July 8.—The Daily Mail gives sensational prominence this morning to mail advices from Vlaskfontein, which attribute to the Boer's inhuman atrocities that the censor would not allow to be described by cable.

The Mail's correspondent says: "A couple of Boers who were armed with Martini's, walked around among the dead and dying. Some they turned over to see if they were dead. If it were otherwise, then one or the other of the Boers shot them as you would an ox. I saw four killed in this way. One youngster pleaded for his life. I heard him say, 'O Christ! don't,' and bang went the rifle. This is what happened."

The Daily Mail protests vigorously against the suppression by the censor of such details.

SYDNEY, C. B. July 8.—Henry Patton, former station agent at Louisburg, was instantly killed at the Coke Ovens on Saturday afternoon, while braking on one of the D. I. & S. Co.'s trains. At the time of the accident he was passing underneath a carrying belt. Patton was standing on the rear of the front car and was struck by the belting on the head and thrown under the wheels of the car. He had been employed only eight days. He leaves a wife and six children in Louisburg.

An Anecdote of Verdi.

The first production of Verdi's opera "Othello" took place at Milan, and all the prominent musical critics of Europe foregathered in the Cathedral City in honor of the occasion. Among them was a Parisian journalist of wide reputation and admitted authority in the musical world. His first care on his arrival in Milan was to seek out Verdi and ask to be allowed to be present at one of the final rehearsals.

The composer received him with extreme politeness, but replied that he could not possibly grant his request, as he had decided that the rehearsals were to be absolutely private, and he could not make an exception in the favor of any one journalist, however distinguished.

The Paris critic, far from pleased at the answer, protested that in these circumstances his account of the opera might not be all he should like it to be. "You see," he explained to the composer, who affected not quite to understand, "I shall have to telegraph my article the same evening. It will necessarily be hastily written, and the impression in Paris the next day may suffer in consequence."

But Verdi was more than equal to the occasion. "My dear sir," he made answer, "I do not write for 'the next day.' The critic bowed himself out.

Utilizing an Ancestor.

A self made man with a taste for art, thinking he would like to have about his house some marble presentments of his ancestors, ordered of a fifth rate sculptor a bust of his grandfather.

In due time it was sent home, and after a few days, his admiration being exhausted, the wealthy man sent for his plumber.

"I don't mind confessing to you," said the former, "that I don't appreciate the fine arts unless they are turned to some useful purpose. Now, I have something to suggest to you."

And he proceeded to give some instructions to the tradesman.

A week later, on the anniversary of his birthday, the millionaire pointed out with pride to his guests in the middle of his conservatory the bust of his grandfather, from the top of whose head rose gracefully a jet of limpid water, falling into a marble basin in which some fine gold and silver fish disported themselves.

Reaching an Understanding.

The young man was visibly annoyed at the questions which the heiress' father insisted on putting. At last he could endure it no longer. His ancestral pride flamed up into his cheeks, and he exclaimed:

"I would have you understand that I am no ordinary fortune hunter." "That's all right," was the stern rejoinder. "I am just as particular as you are. I'd have you understand that I am no plain, everyday duke chaser either."

A Remarkable Incident.

The humorist of the Cynthia (Ky) Democrat remarks: "One of the surgeons of Cynthia has discovered a valuable findment. The other day he used it on the leg of a politician who had sorely been able to walk for several years. Now the politician is running for office. Another trial was on a friend's arm. The friend immediately struck him for ten."
