LIFE A BURDEN

THE CONDITION OF MR GARDINER, SHITH'S FALLS.

He Spent Miserable Days and Sleep. less Nights-Hands, Feet and Lumbs

Stiff and Swollen. From the Record, Smiths' Fails, Out.

"There is wonderful talk about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, why don't you try them?" These words were addressed to Mr. Audrew Girdner, of Smith's Falls, by a friend when he was in the depths of despondency regarding his physical condition. For three years he had suffered so much that life had become a burden to him and oftentimes he says, he almost wished that he might die. Then he spent miseral le days and sleepless nights, now he is enjoying life. Then his feet, hands and limbs were stiff and swollen and he was tormented with a constant stinging, creepy sensation in the body which gavbim no rest day or night; now he is as supple as ever he was, with the suffness, the swelling and the creepy sensation al gone. He attributes it all to the use or Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mr. Gardiner is a man of about 60 years, an old and highly respected rest dent of Smith's Falls. Having Leard good deal of talk about the improvement effected in his health by Dr. Williams Pink Pills the Record sent a reporter to ascertain the exact truth and Mr. Gardin er told him substantially what is related above. He said that he tried a number of doctors-as good doctors as there were in the country-but got no relief. He was given to understand that the trouble was caused by bad circulation of the blood, but nothing did him any good. He could not wear boots his feet were so swollen and when he tried to walk, his legs felt like sticks. Finally he was in duced to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pilis a trial. He took six boxes, he said, but di not see that he was much better. He de termined to quit taking them but was persuaded to continue them for a little while longer. When he had taken ter boxes he was greatly improved and when he had taken twelve boxes he was so well that he did not need any more. It is several months since he has taken them and he has had no return of the trouble. When the reporter saw him he was wear ing his ordinary boots and he said h. could get into and out of a buggy as well as any man of his years in the country.

SNAKES THAT LIVE IN THEES.

Reptiles Whose Venom Causes Madness Hold a Mountain Grove. "The strongest and most agile snakes in the world, perhaps, live in the Lone mesa, Dolores county, Colo.," said the city freight and passenger agent of the Wabash recently. "Some time ago I was traveling through the southwestern portion of the state and chanced upon Lone plateau. My Mexican guide told me much about it that excited my curiosity, but nothing so much as the stories of the strange species of snakes which inhabit the mesa. I was surprised to hear that they live in trees. Unbelievingly I demanded that he take me to their forest home.

"One morning just as the sun was rising we started to find the snake trees. For hours we trudged over the dried plain toward a dark green clump on the mountainside. The trees stood exceedingly close together. Between the trees we made our way as quietly as possible. Suddenly he stopped. There on a limb lay a remarkable snake. Like an emerald rope it was stretched along in the dim light. Jose whistled softly. At once a triangular head arose. Two eyes, gleaming many colors, like opals, were fastened upon us. A red tongue shot out in contrast to the green head. Suddenly Jose clapped his hands. The snake coiled itself on the limb.

"'Would you see it climb, senor?' said

"I nodded, and he stepped forward, raising his staff. The reptile reared himself and hissed in anger. Instinctively I retreated. Jose thrust at him with the staff. Like a flash the slim green snake struck the staff. Three times I heard his fangs hit the oaken stick. Then he turned and with easy speed wound his way up the trunk to the topmost limbs, which swayed and bent under his weight. Apparently it was no effort for the reptile to climb the straight trunk of the tree.

"Every moment he turned a trifle and, crossing and recrossing, proceeded aloft from one side of the trunk to the other. No squirrel could have mounted that tree more easily. Several yards farther on we found a tree fairly alive with snakes. A loud hissing greeted our arrival. A vigorous tapping by Jose caused a speedy ascension after several reptiles had been struck by his staff. Upon its end I found drops of greenish venom and inquired its nature. Jose shuddered slightly. Then. he told me that it was harmless to the veins, but if swallowed would drive men and. And then he told me how jealous Indians in times past had ruined their rivals with a potion of the venom concealed in food. We killed one of the snakes, and today the most valuable curiosity I have is the emerald skin from the Lone

THE NEWBORN BAPT.

Wherein and Why It Is More Helpless Than a Young Brute.

The newborn child is even inferior to the lower animals of the same age in intelligence and helpfulness. A young ape, or, for that matter, a young dog, is far better fitted for his immediate environment than a week old infant. But while the latter struggles enward and upward through a helpless infancy and a weak youth to the perfect man the former never progresses beyond the perfect brute. As Professor J. W. Powell says: "Every child is born destitute of things possessed in manhood which distinguish him from the lower animals. Of all industries he is artless, of all institutions he is lawless, of all languages he is speechless, of all philosophies he is opinonless, of all reasoning he is thoughtless, but arts, institutions, languages, opinions and mentations he acquires as the years go by from childhood to manhood. "In all these respects the newborn babe is hardly the peer of the newborn beast, but as the years pass ever and ever he exhibits his superiority in all of the great classes of activities until the distance by which he is separated from the brute is so great that his realm of existence is another kingdom of nature."

Science is one great, unending question. First, "Is this so?" then, "Why is it so?" are the words forever on the tongues of her votaries. And so we find Professor Alexander Chamberlain in his book, "The Child, a Study In the Evolution of Man," asking, "What is the meaning of the prolonged helplessness of human infancy?" He finds his answer in the following words of the late John Fiske, to whom he frankly gives full "credit for the scientific interpretation of the prolongation of infancy:'

"The prolonged helplessness of the offspring must keep the parents together for longer and longer periods in successive epochs, and when at last the association is so long kept up that the older children are growing mature while the younger ones still need protection the family relations begin to become permanent.

"The parents have lived so long in company that to seek new companionships involves some disturbance of ingrained habits, and meanwhile the older sons are more likely to continue their original association than to establish associations with strangers since they have common 2 p. m., Address on Pig carcasses, illus- objects to achieve and common enmittes bequeathed and acquired with neighboring families.

"As the parent dies the headship of the family thus established devolves upon the oldest or bravest or most sagacious male remaining. Thus the little group gradually becomes a clan, the members of which are united by ties considerably stronger than those which ally them to members of adjacent clans, with whom they may indeed combine to resist the aggressions of yet further outlying clans or of formidable beasts, but toward whom their feelings are usually those of hostile rivalry."

Ancient Ship Timber.

An English paper says: "Noah's ark a dairy female from birth until four years is generally supposed to be the earliest ship of which we have record; but, says Engineering, there exist paintings of Egyptian vessels immensely older than N. B.; B. W. Chipman, Secv. Agriculture, the date of 2840 B. C., usually assigned to the ark, being, indeed, probably 70 and 80 centuries old.

"Moreover, there are now in existence in Egypt boats which were built about the period the ark was constructed. They are, however, small craft, about 35 feet long, 7 or 8 feet wide and 21/2 to 3 feet deep. They were discovered years ago by the eminent French Egyptologist, M. J. de Morgan, in brick vaults near Cairo and were probably funeral boats. They are constructed of three inch acacia and sycamore planks, dovetailed together and fastened with trenails. They have floors, their supports had been removed. "These may be considered side by side seen in a shed at Christiania. This craft was discovered in 1880 and in a funeral to funeral customs of countries so dissimilar as Egypt and Norway."
