CORRESPONDENCE

To the Richibucto Review.

There is not a farmer in the county of Kent but would find a profit in keeping sheep, if the Act of Assembly passed on the 20th of March, 1896 was put in force.

This Act provides that a tax of $1.00 shall be levied on every male dog, and $5.00 on every female dog, unless fifteen free-holders from each parish have caused by petition a by-law to be passed by the Municipal Council exempting taxation outside of one male dog to each household.

This Act seems very liberal to persons wishing to keep one male dog, and if enforced would certainly be some protection to farmers who wish to prosecute a legitimate calling and also provide a fund for losses by depredation of dogs.

Had our Council obeyed the requirements of this law, there would now be a fund of several hundred dollars to meet the many losses of sheep by dogs, lately sustained, and no doubt many useless curs would be dispensed with, while the only dogs kept would be those of some special value and worth the tax levied.

As the Council has neglected to enforce the law, parties who have suffered loss by the depredation of dogs killing their sheep, can now only demand two thirds of the loss sustained, and if refused payment, will be compelled to get a mandamus from the Supreme Court to compel them to execute the provisions of the law and await the collection of a sufficient dog tax to meet their losses, or two thirds of it.

In the mean time farmers, for their own protection, had better combine and decide which is of the most benefit for the county—dogs or sheep.
