THE DEATH OF PRESIDEN' MCKINLEY.

President McKinley is dead. The mingled prayers and petitions that his life might be spared have been unanswered and instead he has passed over to that bourne from which no traveller e're returns. For the third time in the span of an ordinary life the people of the United States are mourning a chief executive who fell a victim to the bullet of a citizen criminal. And the shame of it all is and McKinley, were American freemen, if such a term may be used, robed with the vast powers of citizenship which they so base. ly abused. However, in this case, the assassin has done more to perpetuate the memory of William McKinley than could be accomplished by any other human agency. The deceased president's name is in everyone's mouththose who did not agree with him alive are mourning him dead. He certainly was a wonderful man; gifted with vast executive ability, superb foresight, unswerv able determination, magnetic personality, genial disposition, and a sterling uprightness of character qualities that make for greatness. By some writers he has been classed with Washington and Lincoln as the greatest of American be relieved through a foreign outwere brought face to face with complicated situations which it is but fair to state would have past The expansion of our trade phased the majority of statesmen and commerce is the pressing of the present day. A SIGNIFICANT UTTER-ANCE

The significance of President McKinley's speech at Buffalo has very naturally been deepened by Notices of Births, Marriages and Deathsinsert- the tragic events which followed so swiftly after it. It was an exceedingly important speech quite apart from the circumstances which have brought it into worldwide prominence, inasmuch as it dealt with the marvellous change of opinion which is now taking place in the minds of thoughtful and influential Americans. In that change we are profoundly interested as a nation which cannot fail to be greatly effected by any trade policy our neighbors may adopt.

On Thursday last we gave the more important phases of President McKinley's speech a place in these columns, and drew attention thereto. It may not be amiss to add to what was then published, and the following will be found a complete reproduction of what the President said in relation to trade policy:-

"Our capacity to produce has sin's bullet. developed so enormously and our products have so multiplied that the problem of more markets requires our urgent and immediate attention. Only a broad and enlightened policy will keep what we have. No other policy will get more. In these times of marvellous business energy and gain that the wretches who sent to we ought to be looking to the death, in turn, Lincoln, Garfield future, strengthening the weak places in our industrial and commercial systems, that we may be ready for any storm or strain. By sensible trade arrangements which will not interrupt our home pro duction we shall extend the outlets for our increasing surplus. We must not repose in fancied security that we can forever sell everything and buy in the air. There is no ground little or nothing. We should take from our customers such of their products as we can use without harm to out industries and labor. Both Washington and Lincoln buying will enlarge our sales and did not spoil his chances. production, and thereby make a greater demand for home labor. "The period of exclusiveness is unprofitable. A policy of good- how to run it. Not bad for the will and friendly trade relations rejected of Canada.

The President supplies adequate reasons for such a change. "We must not repose in fancied security that we can forever sell every. thing and buy little or nothing," he says. This is not only sound sense, but it recognizes an inexorable law of exchange and economies. No nation can play a selfish and narrow part very long without provoking those reprisals to which the President alludes in the concluding portion of his speech, and our neighbors are surely realizing that they have gone about as far as they can safely go with their present policy of protection. In the pride of their enormous commercial strength, which has been impressed upon them by the phenomenal expansion of the past five years, they are commencing to look back upon the past with sensations of humiliation. We trust these feelings will be crystalized into a movement as broad and as enlightened as Mr. McKinley's statesmanlike speech would indicate.

The famous slope presents almost a picture of utter ruin. There are but eight persons living in the old town, while a hundred dead ones sleep in the cemetery. Some of the graves are marked with wooden headboards, some with stakes, but many have nothing above them. Nearly all of them were laid to rest without religious rites save Bible reading by old Charlie Pond, who, though a professional gambler, was selected for the religious office owing to his excellent voice and oratorical ability.

In 1853 and 1854 there were 2,000 souls in Poker Flat and 15 stores, 5 hotels, 3 dance halls and 7 gambling houses. There is but one man left today of that original company. He is an old and grizzled veteran, who delights to tell how in 1856 a circus came to town and sold 1,500 tickets of admission at $20 each.-W. M. Clemens in Bookman.

A Day Dream of Tennyson.

In the "Life of Tennyson" occurs the following:

"A kind of waking trance I have frequently had, up from boyhood, when I have been all alone. This has generally come upon me through repeating my own name two or three times to myself silently, till all at once, as it were out of the intensity of the consciousness of individuality, the individuality itself seemed to dissolve and fade away into boundless being, and this not in a coufused state, but the clearest of the clearest, the surest of the surest, the weirdest of the weirdest, utterly beyond words, where death was an almost laughable impossibility, the loss of personality (if so it were) seeming no extinction but the only true life. This might be the state which St. Paul describes, 'whether in the body I cannot tell, or whether out of the body I cannot tell.' I am ashamed of my feeble description. Have I not said the state is utterly beyond words? But in a moment when I come back to my normal state of 'sanity' I am ready to fight for mein liebes Ich and hold that it will last for zons and zons."

II. Richibucto Harbor Lights Changed.

Two pole lights established by the government of Canada on the south beach at the entrance to Richibucto harbor, Strait of Northumberlaad, coast of New Bruns wick, were pat in operation on the 1st instant.

The lights are fixed white, shown from pressed lens lanterns boisted on poles, and should be visible three miles from all points of approach.

The front line is elevated 34 feet above high water mark. The mast is 26 feet high, and stands 112 feet back from the water, at a point 2858 feet southeastwardly from the front light of the old Richibucto harbor range.

Approximate position, from Admiralty chart No. 2430

Lat. N. 46 deg. 42m. 42s. Long, W. 64 deg. 45m. 5s.

The back light is elevated 37 feet above high water mark. The mast is 37 feet high and stands 263 feet S. 1 W. from the front one.

The two lights in one, bearing S. & W., lead to the black can buoy in 41 fathoms that marks the southern limit of the anchorage outside the bar. They also lead between the buoys marking the channel over the bar which carries 12 feet of water, to the red can buoy which marks the sharp turn of the channel to the westward inside the bar. After passing the turning buoy the course up the shore between the north and south beaches is N W. by W. 2 W. From this point up to the town the somewhat tortuous channel is marked by buoys

At the same time that these range lights were established the red back light of the old Richibucto harbor range, on the same south beach, was discontinued, as the morning. alignment now gives only 2 feet water over the bar, but the front white light is yet maintained to guide up from the turn above described.
