Paine's Celery Compound
Cures Sick People and Makes Them Feel Young Again.

ACURED MAN SAYS: I FEEL JUST AS BRIGHT AND YOUNG AS A BOY.

After Many Failures with Physicians and Medicines, Mr. McGruer was Saved By PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

All the combined powers on earth cannot stem the tide of truth that sweeps over this Dominion of ours in regard to the curing and life restoring virtues of Paine's Celery Compound. The thousand cured year after year send such strong and convincing letters of testimony that the most hardened skeptics are forced to admit that Paine's Celery Compound does possess medical powers unknown to other medicines.

The following letter from Mr. A. R. McGruer, Dixon's Corners, Ont., assures you that no matter how desperate your case may be, Paine's Celery Compound will do more for you than you can possibly hope for. Mr. McGruer says: "Some time ago my condition of health was alarming, and I suffered very much. I was laid up three days out of every week, and I often said to my friends that it would be better if it was the Lord's will that I should be called away. Three of the best doctors attended me, but could not relieve me in any way. It was then I was advised to use Paine's Celery Compound, which brought relief at once. After using this great remedy, I found myself a new man, and feel just as bright as a boy of eighteen years. I think Paine's Celery Compound is the greatest medicine in the world."

restore the fair name of the church—consistent followers of that great Reformer whose name we bear; we look to them for the physical and moral purity of generations yet unborn. Because these truths which "make for righteousness" are always born among minorities and are always unpopular with the multitude, those who profess to be living for the betterment of mankind must certainly strive for the creation of majorities. Strive through every influence which may be brought to bear on the individual and the home, and where we are to look for better educated and better educational material than is to be found among our Young People's Societies?

And so, young people, we appeal to you. Oh, take this living question, palpitating with the agonized heartbeats of suffering wives and mothers, warm with the lifeblood of the murdered innocent, and study its grave outlines. Give it serious consideration. If you see in it that which blasts the lives, imperls the souls, destroys the homes, pauperizes and degrades the people—and you can see naught else—then up, up, in the name of the living God, and by your individual influence, and individual ballot, down this traffic to the depths to which it belongs. We believe you are responding to the demand for aggressive action.

"We see your triumph from afar
By faith we bring it nigh."

That wonderful poet of centuries long gone by saw it; with prescient eye, looking down the vistas of coming ages, he cried: "Who is this that locketh forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners?" "This the assembled hosts of the 'Most High.'"

Onward they come, and we see, not faltering in the rear, but in the very vanguard, those young soldiers of the cross: The Baptist Union, the Epworth League, the Christian Endeavorers, the Loyal Woman's Christian Temperance Union! Undaunted by perils, undismayed by perplexities, unflinching in their "No compromise with evil," they press forward in this bloodless battle—young, brave, strong, hopeful, loving, invincible! They can not be discouraged, for though unseen, at the head is their Leader, and "by faith they endure, as seeing him who is invisible." The light which emanates from Him, illuminates the darkness before them, dissipates the mists of sin and ignorance about them. Listen! He speaks. He, their Prophet, Priest and King, in words calm, assured, victorious, in words vibrating with the conscious power of indwelling strength:

"Fear not little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."
"In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer. I have overcome the world."
"And lo! I am with you always, even unto the end."

THE TOILET IS INCOMPLETE WITHOUT POND'S EXTRACT.

RELIEVES CHAFING, ITCHING OR IRRITATION. COOLS, COMFORTS AND HEALS THE SKIN, AFTER SHAVING.

CURVATURE OF THE SPINE.

Easy to Prevent and Easy to Check if Treated in Time.

In infancy and childhood lateral curvature of the spine develops very readily. In some cases, as will be presently shown, the causes are very slight, so that, to use the words of one of our most eminent medical authors, "It is really wonderful that most of us are tolerably straight."

A slight asymmetry of any one of the vertebrae of which the backbone is built up or an abnormal development or lack of development of one of the muscles which hold it upright is sufficient to produce a deviation from its proper position. This of itself would be of comparatively small moment if the organs contained within the trunk were not affected by any considerable change from their proper upright position. A lateral curvature cannot exist without a shortening of the trunk, just as a bow when bent measures less from tip to tip than when it is unstrung. This shortening in turn necessarily implies a crowding together of the organs contained within the trunk.

Constitutional weakness naturally tends to make lateral curvature of the spine more readily acquired. Of specific disorders which produce the same effect, rickets is perhaps the chief.

With the knowledge that lateral deviation is thus easily caused, it is not to be wondered at that causes apparently very slight are frequently the only ones discoverable to account for certain of the many cases coming under the physicians' notice. A baby can scarcely support its back before it is 3 or 4 months old. Yet the proud nurse or mother not infrequently sets it erect or carries it on her arm without a proper support at a much earlier age.

Children who go to school at 6 or 7 years of age are often compelled to sit on a badly shaped bench, sometimes with no support for the back, during school hours. The muscles become tired, and the child leans to one side, usually to the right.

A narrow space between the seat and the desk obliges the child to push between them, so that, in girls particularly, a drag is exerted on one shoulder, or the skirts form an uneven cushion, tilting the spinal column out of the perpendicular. Even in grown men and women occupations requiring a one-sided muscular action affect the vertebrae and therefore the shape of the spine. In children the much softer bones are still more readily affected.

Parents may therefore be pardoned if they insist on abundance of room and considerable lack of restraint for young children in the schoolroom.

Teachers have frequently to take the initiative in matters of school hygiene, especially when their pupils are from homes in crowded insanitary city tenements.

Lateral curvature is rarely congenital. It is in most cases preventable, and cases taken in hand early are usually checked by strict observance of hygienic measures.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

For soiled spots in wall paper try rubbing with dry cornmeal or stale bread.

If drawers or window screens move with difficulty, rub their edges well with hard soap.

Damp cupboards can be made dry by placing a basin of lime on a shelf for a few hours, repeating the process now and again.

Crude petroleum, well rubbed in, is as simple and good a polisher as one can find for floors which have been oiled, varnished or painted.

Never put soda in the water in which you wash china that has any gilding on it. Soda injures the gilding. Instead use soap, which answers just as well and has no ill effects.

Cheese may be kept from drying or molding by wrapping it in a thoroughly wrung cloth that has been dipped in vinegar and then putting it into a paper bag, keeping it in a cool place.

An easy and satisfactory way to remove dust from a painted floor is to wet a flannel bag, wring it out as dry as possible, put it on the broom and drag it in even strokes over the floor. All the dirt will in this way be collected in one place and can be easily taken up without leaving streaks of dust on the paint.

The Great Pitt's Last Words.

The last words of great men are always sacredly treasured, and there is some reason for the belief that in instances the words are polished and changed to suit the occasion. Various dying sentiments have been ascribed to the great William Pitt, and Disraeli was fond of telling a story which he heard from an old writer at the house of commons.

Late one night, said the writer to Disraeli shortly after he entered parliament, I was called out of bed by a messenger in a post chaise shouting to me outside the window.

"What is it?" I said.

"You're to get up and dress and bring some of your pork pies down to Mr. Pitt at Putney."

So I went, and as we drove along the messenger told me that Mr. Pitt had not been able to take any food, but had said, "I think I could eat one of Bellamy's pork pies."

So I was sent for post haste. When I arrived, Mr. Pitt had passed away. They were his last words:

"I think I could eat one of Bellamy's pork pies."

Benefit of Travel.

Travel enlarges a man's mind and corrects many erroneous first impressions. Thus a man watching golf players in this country may form an impression that to play the game he requires a creak, an extra creak, a long creak, a short creak, a left hand creak, a right hand creak and a little behindhand creak, a right hand slicer, a left hand slicer, a long stummy, a short stummy and a medium stummy, two brassies and an extra brassy, besides a right hand brassy and two medium left hand brassies. Then he goes to Scotland, the home land of golf, and sees the Scotch boys enjoying the game with hockey sticks.

Illustrated.

"How do you manage to get rid of bores?" asked Snodgrass as he came in and took a seat by the editor's desk.

"Oh, easily enough," replied the editor.

"I begin to tell them stories about my smart youngster. Now, only the other day he said—'What! Must you go? Well, good morning!'"

All stone fruits are considered to be injurious for those who suffer from the liver and should be used cautiously.

EXCHANGED VALISES.

Why the Rightful Owner of One Never Called For It.

The story was told by a quiet, black bearded gentleman who had registered from Pittsburgh and who happened to be one of a group of yarn spinners in the corridor of a hotel.

"I am in the foundry business at present," he said, "but in my younger years I took a course at the old Ohio Medical college in Cincinnati. It was the custom at that time and may be yet for the advanced students to do a good deal of individual dissecting work at their rooms, and for that purpose a regular division was made of certain of the cadavers at the college. One student, for instance, would get an arm, another a foot and another some other section, which they would carry away and study at their leisure.

"One evening—I will never forget it I live to be a thousand—I secured the forearm of an unusually fine subject, a muscular negro, and, putting it in a small valise, started for my quarters in the eastern suburbs of the city. The mule car I took was unusually crowded, and I put my valise on the floor. When I reached my rooms and took a second look at it, I was shocked to see that I had picked up somebody else's luggage by mistake. I hated to lose my specimen, but what troubled me a hundred times more was the thought of the fright that it would probably occasion some innocent person, maybe a woman, and on reflection I concluded to report the matter at once to the police.

"Accordingly I got on the cars again and went directly to headquarters, where I was fortunate enough to catch the chief just going out. He heard my story in his private office and agreed with me that the discovery of my ghastly package would be apt to fill some household with horror and consternation. 'We will have somebody rushing in here before morning with a clew to a mysterious murder,' he said; 'and by the way, suppose that we open the valise you have with you. It may furnish us with the address of the owner.' It was locked, but he soon found a key that fitted, and when he looked inside he gave a prolonged whistle. 'Your valise will never be reported, doctor,' he said dryly. The one I had picked up contained a kit of burglars' tools."

AMBIDEXTERITY.

Should the Use of Both Hands Be Encouraged?

The question, Should ambidexterity be encouraged? is answered in the negative by a writer in The American Journal of Insanity and upon the ground that, while coarse movements may be performed nearly as well by one half of the body as by the other, accurate and expert movements require a higher organization of one half of the brain than the other. Hence the more expert hand should be consciously still more and more specialized. Making the ordinarily quiescent half of the brain assume control tends, it is said, to impairment of mental processes as well as inferiority of physiologic speed and dexterity.

All of which we deny, both fact and theory being untrue. The writer has doubtless been misled by observation of the function of speech, which is single and in execution requires the control of a single center. We have but one voice, but we have two hands, which in many cases at different instants may be put in action with the same dexterity. Many surgeons can operate equally well with either hand, and many artists paint with either hand, and we have seen men who could write as well with the one hand as with the other. The critic of ambidexterity may reply that this is impossible with synchronous movements, forgetting that in the musician, and especially in the pianist and organist, there is the most marvelous expertness of both hands executing most complicated and entirely different functions and at the same instant.

The arguments against ambidexterity appear not only inconclusive, but are squarely contradicted by facts. Surely also they are against a desirable freedom of the mind. Without the musician's ambidexterity life would be deprived of much charm. We should encourage "divided attention" and that large power of the mind over the body shown in the synchronous control of multifarious activities.

Comparatively Easy.

A benevolent old lady stopped on a street corner to wait for her car and was attracted by the bright face of a young Italian who was grinding his organ near by.

She found a 10 cent piece in her purse and dropped it into his hand, well repaid by the brilliant smile which accompanied his "Tanka."

"It must be real hard to turn that crank as steady as you do and keep such good time," she said cordially.

"Not so difficult," said the Italian, showing his white teeth in another smile. "You see, madam, I no hava the monka. To turn the cranks so steady, keepa the time and watcha the monka, madam, that takka the arteest—the true arteest. It ees the monka that demanda the genius, madam!"

A Royal Cake.

The Princess Elizabeth, daughter of Charles I, was a domestic sort of princess and was noted for the fine cake she made. One of her old recipes is headed, "To make a cake the way of the royal princess, the Lady Elizabeth," and reads: "Take a half pint of flour, half a pint of rosewater, a pint of ale yeast, a pint of cream, boil it, one and a half pounds butter, six eggs, leave out the white; four pounds currants, one-quarter pound sugar, one nutmeg, a little salt. Work it very well and let it stand half an hour by the fire and then work again, and then make it up and let it stand one and a half hours in the oven. Let not the oven be too hot."

Paid Her Back.

Mabel—'Sibyl' doesn't know a thing about whist. Why, the other day she was my partner at a tournament, and she trumped my ace!

Chorus—How mean!

Mabel—Yes, but I paid her back. She led an ace next round, and I trumped it! —London King.

He Wasn't That Sort of a Boy.

THE WORLD OVER.

The most recent returns bring the total casualties among the British troops in South Africa, up to date, to 20,961 deaths, of whom 799 were officers; 392 officers and 4082 men were killed in action, while 127 officers and 1387 men subsequently died of their wounds. The death from disease amounted to 251 officers and 9976 men. To these must be added deaths to those sent home as invalids, missing, and invalids discharged the service as unfit.

PORT TOWNSEND, Win., Oct. 10.—The steamer Santa Ana has arrived from Nome bringing 85 passengers and $100,000 in dust belonging to returning miners.

Captain Strand reports that when he weighed anchor at Nome a considerable quantity of mud was brought up and some of the miners on board prospected it with the result that several small nuggets of gold were found, the largest of which was worth one dollar.

The Santa Ana was anchored one and a half miles from shore in six fathoms of water, and the captain expresses the opinion that with a deep sea dredge a large amount of gold could be secured.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Mrs. Lucy H. Carroll, who lived with her father at 76 South Elliott place, Brooklyn, was shot and seriously wounded at her house early this morning by a man known as Captain John E. Neilson. The woman was shot three times. Neilson then shot himself in the right temple and died instantly.

Mrs. Carroll was removed to the Brooklyn hospital where it was said that there was a chance that she might survive her injuries. She told her story of the tragedy to the police, saying that she did not know the man who had shot her.

"I was awakened," said Mrs. Carroll, "by seeing a man in my room. I was much alarmed and cried: 'What do you want here?'"

"Without replying the intruder drew a revolver and fired three times and then turned and shot himself.

"I do not know him nor can I imagine why he should have entered my room. Mrs. Carroll's husband is said to be a soldier in the Philippines.

"The police found a portrait of Neilson in Mrs. Carroll's room and when she was told of this she said she had known Neilson for some time, that he had paid her much attention and he had been very jealous recently. Neilson was about 35 years of age and was at one time a sea captain.

Mrs. Carroll is about 30 years old. Her father, whose name is Koruder is a dry goods merchant with a place of business in Brooklyn.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—The storm raised by Buller's outburst yesterday afternoon on the South African situation continues to grow. The speech is the one topic of discussion and it is the general anticipation that disciplinary measures will follow. The tone of the press generally is one of surprised amazement at his indiscretion. The people of England generally stuck to him throughout, and his wife's serial influence has been most powerful and even reached the court. It has been decided that he would be elevated to the peerage on the next honor list; but it is doubtful now, after yesterday's confession that he advised the surrender of Ladysmith, "A humiliation compared with which," as Standard says "all other reverses of the war would have been trivial" that neither King or people will continue to favor him.

DAYTON, Oct. 11.—Pending an investigation which will determine whether or not the charge of murder shall be preferred against Mrs. Belle Witwer, suspected of causing a number of deaths by poisoning, she is still in custody, though habeas corpus proceedings to secure her release are momentarily expected. The bodies of Frank D. Witwer, the fourth and last husband of the suspect and Mrs. Emma C. Pugh, her sister, both of whom are supposed to have been victims were disinterred early to-day. The vital organs of both bodies were recovered, placed in sealed jars and turned over to Prof.

A searching party composed of 300 Bulgarian infantry and 500 dragoons are scouring the ranges of Dospat and the Rhodopegebirgen. The American consul general at Constantinople has arrived at Sofia with an evangelical pastor from Philippopolis as dragoman, and both are taking energetic steps with the Bulgarian government to effect Miss Stone's release.

The reputed leader of the gang who killed Stambuloff has met his fate. Suspected of being associated in the capture of Miss Stone, he was shot dead on the frontier. Though £1,000 reward had been placed on his head for the murder of Stambuloff, Hallo, the name under which he was known, was too influential a ruffian for the Bulgarian police to arrest.

Four additional Brigands have been captured and a band of twenty, fully armed were discovered near Dubnitza and driven into the mountains again.

A CLIPPING FROM PLATTSVILLE ECHO.

Mrs. J. Barnett Figures in an Interesting Article in the Local Paper.

Interviewed by a Representative of the Echo—Story of Her Troubles as Related by Herself—Her Opinion of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

PLATTSVILLE, Ont., Oct. 14 (Special).—The case of Mrs. J. Barnett of this town was found of sufficient importance to be published at length in the Plattsville Echo. To the representative of that live local paper she made the following statement concerning her experience with Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I have been ailing for years, but in the spring of last year, I grew very much worse. The symptoms of my disease were nervousness, rheumatism in the left arm, pains in the small of the back, up the spinal column and back of the head, through the eyes, left side of the body and occasionally the right side.

"I grew weak, for I had no appetite and night after night I could not sleep. I was a physical wreck. I was treated by doctors, but their medicines afforded me no relief. I chanced to read in Dodd's Almanac of the virtue in Dodd's Kidney Pills and the wonderful cures effected by them.

"The symptoms as therein explained correspond with my own, and I started taking Dodd's Kidney Pills according to directions. Before I had finished one box there was a decided improvement in my condition. My appetite returned, the pain was lessened and I was able to sleep. I have taken in all twelve boxes and have completely recovered. No sign of my old trouble remains and I ascribe it only to Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's Kidney Pills are a wonderful discovery."

This clipping is reproduced as it is typical of the way so many women feel about Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's Kidney Pills have been often truly called "Woman's best friend."

CENTRAL VILLAGE, Conn., Oct. 11.—Mr. Samuel Carpenter, of Canterbury Township, eighty years old, engaged Mrs. John Tracey six days ago as housekeeper for his home. The couple liked each other well enough to engage the Rev. Mr. Davis, of the Methodist church to marry them last Sunday, and the wedding occurred at the parsonage. The bride is of the same age as the groom, and the happy couple are looking forward to many years of happiness and bliss.

Mr. Carpenter has led six former brides to the altar, and his wife has had one previous husband. The Canterburians are offering congratulations to the bride and groom, they being the oldest couple ever married in the town. They are off on a wedding trip.

PARIS, Oct. 11.—The police finally have caught three of a gang of women footpads who have been terrorizing the fashionable residence parts of the city.

Two of the prisoners, one 20 years old, the other 31, were caught just after they had "held up," with draw knives, a wealthy bachelor who was returning home at midnight. The man allowed himself to be relieved of his money, watch and jewelry, but had followed the fair robbers at safe distance until they reached the boulevards, where there still were many people. An outcry then caused a chase, which ended in their capture.

The other woman bandit is 40 years old, and is stronger than most men. She made the mistake of stopping a secret service man at sight of her drawn revolver, instantly knocked her down with a blow on the mouth. He managed to handcuff her, but only after a fierce battle in the course of which she bit off half of his left ear.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Three battalions of the sixth Bulgarian infantry regiment marched through the country between Dubnitza and Samakoy and searched the villages of the Riloklosters district, in one of which it was reported the Brigands had concealed Miss Stone, says a Sofia correspondent.
