OUR OTTAWA LETTER.

OTTAWA, 21st March.—A change has come over Parliament. For weeks past there has been nothing more exciting than an occasional an desultory skirmish; but this week we have had a general engagement, with heavy firing from both sides. This has had the effect of filling up the galleries and bringing the members from their working quarters in various parts of the Commons building into the Chamber. The champions on each side have stepped forth in their armor, and all week the Commons has been ringing with cheers and counter cheers. It has been an interesting battle.

The budget was delivered on Monday, and this was the signal for the opening of hostilities. Mr. Fielding did not speak longer than an hour and a half; but in that time he said enough to cheer the hearts of those on the Government side and the hearts of all those who are concerned in the progress and prosperity of the country. He remarked at the outset that, when speaking last year on a similar occasion, he had expressed the opinion that the Dominion had about reached the crest of the wave of business activity. He had not then anticipated depression; but had merely suggested that a check might be looked for in the continued advancement of the country by the leaps and bounds which had marked preceding years.

His fears had not, however, been realized. The business condition of the country during the past year had been most satisfactory. In every branch of industry there had been the most gratifying prosperity, while in the paramount industry of agriculture, which he regarded as the very foundation of the country's resources, the transportation facilities had been overtaxed in order to carry away the fruits of the harvest. The only disappointment of the year had been the results of the census, and while these were unsatisfactory they were not discouraging.

The revenue for 1901 had reached the unprecedented figure of $52,514,701. This had been brought about by an increase from all the sources of income, the leading item being $450,190 from excise. The next largest item of increase was in receipts from the Intercolonial, the figures being $439,219. The Post Office had yielded $235,969 more than the preceding year, and notwithstanding the reduction in postage the income from the sale of stamps is already greater than it was before the change. Such a result affords strong testimony of the happy conditions which prevail throughout the country.

The expenditure on consolidated fund was $46,666,367, or an increase of $3,591,088 over 1900. There was thus a surplus for the year of $5,700,000. The capital expenditure had, however, been exceptionally large during the year; so that the net result had been to increase the public debt by nearly $6,000,000. This was really the first large increase during the Liberal regime; but when measured against the record for the Conservative period it was not a thing to occasion alarm. During 18 years the Tories increased the debt by an average of $6,563,075; while for the six years of Liberal rule the average annual increase will fall far below $3,000,000. This ought to be regarded by every reasonable man as an exceedingly satisfactory result.

Mr. Fielding gave many statistical proofs of the abounding prosperity of the Dominion during the past year. Our total trade had increased by $5,385,921, chiefly in exports. As compared with 1900 the deposits of the people in the chartered banks had increased $3,618,171, while in the savings banks $4,598,860 had been added to the total sum on deposit. The circulation of Dominion bank notes showed an excess over the previous year of $5,118,621; while, as a further proof of commercial expansion, the tons of freight carried over the railway had increased during the year by 1,043,188.

The Minister of Finance announced that there would not be any changes in the tariff this session. He did not claim that it was a perfect tariff; but it had proved very successful. Any one comparing the conditions to-day with those which prevailed under the period of the National Policy would be bound to admit that the changes made in 1897 had been vindicated by results. It was important there should be a reasonable measure of tariff stability. Nothing would be more likely to unsettle business than to begin tinkering with the tariff, and hence the Government had resisted applications for many small changes. Adjustments might take place later as necessity arose.

The reply of the leader of the Opposition was moderate and as effective as possible from the standpoint of the Conservatives. It was quite to be expected that he would enlarge upon the expenditure during recent years, and point to the increases as evidence of broken faith on the part of Liberals. That matter has, however, been so often discussed, and the judgment of the people at large has been so frequently expressed in relation to it, that it is not worth while to go into the subject just now. Suffice it to say, that Mr. Borden presented the case in the thoroughly one-sided way that is usual with Conservatives and their press.

The element of novelty in the speech of the leader of the Opposition was the moving of an amendment to the effect that, "This House, regarding the operation of the present tariff as unsatisfactory, is of opinion that this country requires a declared policy of such adequate protection to its labor, agricultural products, manufactures and industries, as will at all times secure the Canadian market for Canadians. And, while thus firmly maintaining the necessity of such protection to Canadian interests, this House affirms its belief in a policy of reciprocal trade preferences within the Empire." Mr. Borden was barely able to introduce this amendment before the House adjourned for that sitting.

It will be seen at a glance that this amendment effectively disposes of the contention which has been so often made by Conservatives, both in Parliament and in the press, that the present Government has practically adopted the National Policy. In future no one will be able to advance that argument at least. The Opposition are now committed to the view that the present Administration has cut away from protection, and that the National Policy, neither in letter nor in essence, is involved in the present tariff. This is one thing which Mr. Borden's amendment will definitely settle, although that was not the purpose he had in view. The motion itself is brought forward now in the hope that it may be turned to good account at some time in the future, when times may not be so prosperous.

Sir Richard Cartwright replied to the leader of the Opposition, and he did so in that masterly way which always marks his efforts in Parliament. Some form of rheumatic gout has made it almost impossible for Sir Richard to walk; but he stood on his feet for nearly three hours on Tuesday, and spoke with all his old-time vigor and incisiveness. It is always a pleasure to listen to his refined diction and trenchant arguments. Space is not left me to take up the points which Sir Richard brought forward, particularly those in relation to the census, and they must be held over until next week.

The hottest fight of the week arose over the effort of the Opposition to compel the Government to call P. S. Archibald as a witness before the Public Accounts Committee. It will be remembered that reference was made to this matter in last week's letter. When the motion came up in the House Mr. Blair explained frankly and fully why he opposed the calling of Mr. Archibald. He pointed out that the matter under inquiry had reference wholly to matters of account; that Mr. Archibald knew nothing about Intercolonial accounts; that he could not possibly throw any light on the subject, and that it was unreasonable to ask Parliament to sanction his being summoned. He also made it quite clear that Mr. Archibald had been dismissed for corrupt partisanship in 1897, and that his object in coming to Ottawa would not be to give impartial testimony, but to say anything he could to hurt the men who had dismissed him. He had been at Ottawa in previous sessions, living at the public expense for weeks at a stretch, and it was about time that sort of thing was brought to a stop.

Of course, the Opposition made a violent outcry against this course. They tried to make it appear that Mr. Blair was afraid to have Mr. Archibald called. This insinuation was warmly resented by Mr. Fielding, who challenged the Opposition to make a charge against the conduct of the Intercolonial, assuring them that if they did so they could summon all the witnesses they pleased; but it was indelible to go on year after year bringing up Mr. Archibald to Ottawa to give worthless testimony. In the absence of any charge whatever it could only be expected that competent witnesses would be brought to Ottawa at public expense. The judgment of Parliament was on the side of this view, and the motion to call Mr. Archibald was defeated by a majority of 44.

The budget debate is still in progress, and to those who sit in the galleries it must sound very much like a political campaign. It is not thought that it will last longer than the early part of next week.

THE MARITIME WINTER FAIR.

It has now been definitely decided that the next maritime winter fair will be held at Amherst, N. S., as early as possible in the Month of December next.

The town of Amherst and County of Cumberland with most commendable enterprise are arranging to erect a suitable building which will not only contain the show rooms for the various classes of exhibits but also will be thoroughly equipped with a slaughtering room and cooling room for carrying through the block test. An auditorium that will seat at least 2,000 persons will be provided, and it will be so arranged that all may see the judging ring and hear the lectures delivered there.

The Dominion Department of Agriculture, and the Governments of each of the Maritime Provinces have promised substantial aid, and officers of the various departments of Agriculture will join with the Maritime Stock Breeders' Association in the management of the show.

A meeting of the executive committee of the Maritime Stock Breeders' Association was held recently, at which Mr. F. W. Hodson, Dominion Live Stock Commissioner, was present, and a prize list was decided upon.

The prizes arranged for will, for fat stock, be upon even a more liberal scale than last year. Over $400 dollars will be given to dairy classes, and a considerable number of special prizes put up. If the poultry men of the Maritime Provinces desire it, a liberal prize list will be put up for live poultry. All the educational features of the last exhibition will be enlarged upon, and the best live stock specialists in the world will be secured as judges and lecturers.

The new prize lists will be available early in May, and all who desire to secure a copy should send their name and address to the secretary, W. W. Hubbard, St. John, N. B.

DR. TALMAGE.

THE GRAVEST FEARS ARE ENTERTAINED FOR HIS RECOVERY.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Dr. T. De Witt Talmage is dangerously ill at his residence on Massachusetts avenue, in this city, and the gravest fears are entertained for his recovery. It was said to-day by a friend of the family that a fatal termination would not be a surprise. Dr. Talmage returned from a trip to Mexico a week ago. He was taken ill with a severe cold en route to Washington, and has been since lying in a semi-comatose condition.

HON. DAVID WARK.

OLDEST MEMBER OF ANY PARLIAMENT IN THE BRITISH EMPIRE, NEW BRUNSWICK SENATOR HAS DONE GOOD WORK.

The oldest member of any Parliament in the British Empire, and probably the oldest representative in any of the national assemblies of earth, is the Hon. David Wark of Fredericton, New Brunswick, who has just entered upon the ninety-ninth year of his useful career, writes the Ottawa correspondent of The Montreal Witness. Fifty-seven years ago he was chosen member for the County of Kent in the New Brunswick Legislature. After playing an active part in that body at confederation, he was raised to the Canadian Senate, which he has attended without interruption since 1867. Mr. Wark's life has been one of value to his country. In one sense he may be termed the father of the Canadian Confederation, since it was the results drawn from legislation of his framing that convinced the colonies in favor of union. On his initiative there was adopted twenty years before the union a free interchange of commodities between Britain's several colonies on the northern half of this continent. The advantages of this broad-minded step were made plain to all, and gradually there came a conviction that instead of rivalry the position of all would be strengthened before the world by a joining of interests.

A marvellous monument of the results of regular habits and temperate living is the life of this man. At this age he is as clear of mind and as vigorous of frame as most men twenty years his junior. There is nothing that would offend him more than an offer of support. Sturdy independence has been a leading characteristic of his whole life. The very messenger who stepped forward to help him on with his coat would be waved back. The fire of the born reformer still shines in his eye. His last address in the Senate was a complaint that there was not given that branch of the Legislature more to do. Three-quarters of a century on Canadian soil has not clouded his love for Ireland, the land of his birth. Mr. Wark's longevity comes of no fad practice. He has taken regular exercise and refrained from too vigorous indulgence in table delicacies. For years he has eaten but two meals a day—breakfast and tea—but in this, as well as all else, he has adhered to regularity.

Senator Wark was one of the first public men in this section of the empire to identify himself with the Imperial federation movement. He is in favor of any policy that would strengthen the bond between the motherland and her colonies. He would vote to-morrow for inter-colonial free trade. He has long advocated the improvement of Canada's trade relations with the United States. The breadth of view which prompted his first public act of consequence—the adoption of free trade between the units of British North America—has been apparent in almost every speech he made. He would like to see confederation rounded off by the inclusion of Newfoundland. In Parliament this wonderful old man has consistently supported every movement that was calculated to elevate the people's morals. In a letter written by his own hand the other day Senator Wark announces that he will probably be up to Ottawa for a portion of the session.

WONDERS OF THE HEART.

All the blood in the human body passes through the heart in about three minutes. The heart beats 70 times a second, 4200 times an hour, 100,500 times a day, throwing out 2 1/2 ounces of blood a second, 656 lbs. an hour, 7 3/4 tons a day. It is only when supplied with pure, rich blood that the heart, an organ 6 inches long by 4 inches wide, can accomplish this enormous amount of work and rebuild its own wasted tissues. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the most effective treatment available for heart affections because it forms new, red corpuscles in the blood and gives to it that life-sustaining quality which is necessary to the health of every organ.
