A SPLENDID SHOWING.

In its Annual Financial Review the New York Times calls attention to the splendid progress which Canada has been making in the past five years, which is particularly flattering on account of the criticism coming from an outside authority. Whatever we may think of the management of our national affairs in recent years, the outside world has but one opinion -one of surprise at what Canada; has accomplished in so short time. The Times says:-

"Barring a faint note of protest from one or two large industries, which claim to be affected by the will have here. preferential tariff to British goods, the story at the close of 1901 is of utter monotony in its tale of prosperity. Foreign trade has touch ed the highest point on record, though in that respect 1901 has The Economist, of London, sees a followed upon a long series of years in which trade has been expanding enormously.

Canada The banks of the Dominion, nerve centres of business and industry, have been making large profit and their circulation is stretched to the limit. Some detailed figures in these matters will show the force of the statements.

The figures of the foreign trade of Canada touched in 1897 the highest point up to that time, previous years having been fluctuat ing since high water mark in 1893. Since 1897 the figures have be closed to all who have neither

These five years show a gain of 50 per cent. in Canada's toreign trade. No other country in the world shows as great a proportionate increase. The growth continues. The foregoing figures are for the fiscal years ending June 30. For the first five months of the present fiscal year, namely, since June 30 last, there has been almost unmanageable." While another notable increase, the five months showing an aggregate of foreign trade larger by nearly fourteen million dollars than the foreign trade of the first five assimilate many different kinds of months of the last fiscal year.

Possibly it may give an idea of the proportions Canadian foreign trade has reached to say that while the foreign trade of the United States is at present at the rate of $30 per head of population, that of Canada is $70 per head, considerably more than double.

IMMIGRATION.

This country wants immigrants But she does not want all sorts, all ages or conditions without regard to quality. Her great need Beents perinch each continuation. But it is right to insist that desirable immigrants deserve to be looked atter. They very likely need to All communications must be accompanied by be guided and advised when they reach our shores as strangers. And this implies government supervision of a sensible and helpful, not a mere perfunctory, kind.

It is satisfactory to learn from some of the Canadian immigration agencies in the British Isles and Europe that there are signs of increased interest in Canada among those Europeans who show a disposition to emigrate. And we know that the visit to the United Kingdom recently of the Premier of Ontario and some of the Dominion ministers has done something to stimulate folk in the Old land to look to Canada as a promising future home. We are even encouraged to hope that per sons in authority in Great Britain, who have publicly expressed ad miration for Canada, may "put a spoke in our wheel" by saying the necessary word to send British emigrants in our direction. We may be able to make of them in a few years valuable producing Canadians, while if they remained in the old country they would notably the woolen manufacture, never have half the chance they

So also will another continent," namely, Australia.

In answer to its own question, where, then, are European emigrants to go? the Economist thinks the only countries open to the wandering surplus population which must leave, are South America and England. As to Engcome here, because they might add difficulty to problems already Canada does not want riff raff from any country, she has already shown that she can receive and immigrants. Nay, some who have come among us, and who were looked at askance as being of very questionable value, are turning out better than expected because surroundings are novel, educative, and perhaps stimulating. Our development, now pro ceeding at an unusual rate, shows openings for willing workers in directions not thought of a tew decades ago. There is no feature of the day more fraught with important interest for our Government and our people than that of immigration.

THRIFTY ADVANCEMENT IN CANADA.

At the recent annual meeting of the Bankers' Association, held in Montreal, the President, Mr. Clouston, General Manager of the Bank of Montreal, explained the present commercial and financial condition of Canada. During the past year the bank circulation had expanded to the extent of $5.600,-000 public deposits and increased $40,000,000, and banks found em ployment for $14,000,000 more loans. For the fiscal year ended June 30 the increase in foreign trade over the previous year had reached $5,000,000, although 1899-1900 had been an exceptional year. The whole foreign trade for the year amounted to $377,-725,600, which is an advance of $146,000,000, or 63 per cent., on the trade of 1896. This change had taken place within only five

Taking a wider range to illustrate the thrift as well as the prosperity of the people, Mr. Clouston stated that the average deposits a head of the whole population in the various joint stock, Government, and savings banks of the country had steadily risen from $19 in 1871, $27 in 1881, and $40 in 1891, to $74 in 1901. He added also: "Home trade has also greatly prospered. Manufacturing concerns, with few exceptions. have been busily employed, railway traffics have been the largest in the history of the country, labor continues scarce, and the rate of wages relatively higher; mercantile failures are few in number, and not formidable in extent." In speaking of the census, he said: "What, after all, Canada needs is quality rather than quantity. Mere numbers do not necessarily insure stability, strength, or pros-

STOICISM OF THE BOER.

Gen. Delarey, the Boer commandant, is probably the most modern and up to date of the Afrikander fighters. He is the officer who engineered the clever capture of the Scots Fusiliers. He is now the main pillar of the dwindling Boer army and unless stopped by a bullet he will probably be the last to leave the field. For eveven years he sat in the Volksraad but he was known as the silent man. He rarely spoke except in secret council, and he was warmly opposed to the sending of the ultimatum to Great Britain.

He has no love for Kruger. "No good," he says, "can ever come to us until that old man has passed away."

He is the one Boer general who refused to accept men who had taken oath of

But Delarey fights on and at his side is another son, younger, but as brave as the first. One British critic writing of the war, says that all would have gone well land, "We do not want to see them always if there had been more Delarey In the interior are volcanoes and vast and less Kruger.

Athletic Appetites.

"The actual amount of good roast beef that a table of athletes will consume," writes Walter Camp in The Century, "is something appalling to the uninitiated. Three members of a Yale football team once went to Cambridge to watch a match between Harvard and some other team. These three men stopped at a hotel for their luncheon. Among other things the spokesman of the party ordered three portions of cold roast beef. 'But, sir,' said the waiter, 'two portions will be a great plenty for all three of you.' The giant of the party looked up blandly at the servant and said, 'You bring the three portions and then watch us eat it.' "When the writer was captain of the team, long before the days of special method in management, the eleven were to play at Cambridge and, leaving New Haven the afternoon of the day preceding the match, went to a Boston hotel for dinner and the night. Most of the men were readily collected at one or two large tables, but a certain rusher, being late, had seated himself at a table in a distant part of the dining room, and he was told by the manager to order his own dinner. That boy's dinner, and it is needless to say that it was without wine, came to the extraordinary total of $13.85! He was quite able to play the next day, how-

The Joke on the Snake Charmer. Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans when a young officer was on the Indian station in the man-of-war Delaware. With several others he set up a bungalow on shore. He tells in "A Sailor's Log," published by the Appletons, what happened to a snake charmer that came

"The unfortunate thought came to one of our men that it would be a good idea to get the Mohammedan drunk to see what he would do. So he prepared a dose for him that was very effective. He poured a good stiff drink of brandy into a beer glass and then filled it with gin instead of water. The charmer took kindly to the drink and in a short time rolled out of his chair on to the floor very drunk and was soon fast

"The bag of snakes had not been thought of up to this time, but it also fell, and the inhabitants quickly spread over the floor. In the meantime five American officers took to the table and, drawing their feet up, carefully remained there until the snake charmer slept off his dose. He snored quietly while the snakes crawled over and around him, but it was a long time before he finally came to himself, secured his pets and took them away. We did not repeat that experiment."

Clocks With "Wheels." "Clocks are certainly queer things," said the man who was tinkering at the hall clock in a suburban house the other day. "They get cranky spells just like people. Sometimes they really act as though they were bewitched. A friend of mine had a little clock that had behaved itself and kept good time for years. One day it took a notion to lay off for awhile, and they couldn't get it started again. My friend's wife was cleaning the room several days afterward, and she took the clock and laid it down flat on its back on a chair. It started to go at once and ticked away at a great rate, but as soon as she placed it on end it stopped again. Well, they set it, and for a time it acted all right as long as it remained on its back. But it soon got cranky again and refused to go. The other day, just for fun, they turned it upside down, and, would you believe it, that crazy clock started off again. Now it only runs when it is standing on its head, and they are wondering what new foolishness it will develop next."

It seems that there is an unwritten code of sleeping car ethics which has its fine distinctions. The International says: "The seasoned traveler enters the Pullman as if it were a room in a club with which he is familiar, but which he has not visited for some time. He stows away his belongings, according to his habit, puts on his traveling cap and a pair of light shoes or slippers and overgaiters, gets out his newspapers and book and, not forgetting his smoking outfit, is ready to be comfortable. Be it remembered that if slippers be donned they must always be accompanied by overgaiters, for without these latter the slippered foot is not permissible under the unwritten law of sleeping car travel."

When California Was Unknown. In an old geography printed in 1815 appears the following: "California is a wild and almost unknown land. Throughout the year it is covered with dense fogs, as damp as unhealthful. plains of shifting snows, which sometimes shoot columns to great heights. This would seem nearly incredible were it not for the well authenticated accounts of travelers."

Not Satisfactory. "Mose," said Mr. Subbubs, "I want you to clean out my cellar tonight." "'Deed, sah," Mose protested, "I kaint do no wuck laik dat at night, sah, dat would be satisfact'ry to yo', sah." "Why, not? You've often cleaned out my chicken coop at night." "Yes, sah; but I reckon dat wuzn' satisfact'ry to yo', sah.".

WINTER FAIR BUILDING FOR AMHERST, N. S.

So highly pleased were the citizens of Amherst, N. S. with the success of the Maritime Winter Fair held in that town last month, that immediate action was aken to have the show permanently ocated there. It was suggested that the wn and county should combine to erect and equip a suitable building and to main ain the same for a term of ten years. Acting on this suggestion, a public meetng was called, at which the citizens tinnimously authorized the town council o borrow the sum of $10,000 to provide he necessary accomodation. It is conidently expected that the county of Cumerland will also vote several thousand collars for the same purpose, and it is ractically assured that Amherst is to be he home of a winter fair, which will rove as great an educational factor in he Maritime Provinces, as the Guelph Vinter Fair is in Ontario.
