HOW MAUD SET A HEN.

(Toronto Star). Maud Muller on a summer, a day set a hen in a brand new way. (Maud, you see was a city girl, trying the rural life awfully.) She covered a box with tinsel gay, lined it snugly with new-mown hay. Filled it nicely with eggs, and then started to look for a likely hen, out of the flock selected one. And then she thought that her work was done. It would have been, but this stubborn hen stood up and cackled "ka-doot!" and then Maud Muller came, and in a hurt surprise looked coldly into the creature's eyes; then tied its legs to the box. "You bet I know how to make you set," but still it stood, and worse and worse shrieked forth its wrongs to the universe. Kicked over the box with its tinsel gay, and indignantly flapped away. Then a bad boy, over the barnyard fence, Tee-heed: "Say, Maud, there's a difference 'tween hens, you know, and it is that one says 'Ka-doot!' and one 'Ka-dat!'" Then Maud recalled that the ugly brute she tried to set had said "Ka-doot!" And ever since that historic day she blushes in an embarrassed way to think of the hobbie she made once when she tried to set a gentleman hen,

CURING CLOVER HAY.

By F. W. HODSON, LIVE STOCK COMMISSIONER.

In a recent article I called attention to the desirability of cutting hay at a comparatively early stage of maturity. In this connection it may be of interest to have some notes from that well known farmer and Institute speaker, Mr. Henry Glendenning of Manilla, Ont., in regard to his experience with a new plan of curing clover hay. Mr. Glendenning says that he prefers to cut clover hay when it is in full bloom, or when the blossom contains the greatest amount of honey. Cut in the morning after the dew is off, that which is cut in the forenoon may be raked up immediately after the noon hour, and put in cocks. The mower should not be run later than four o'clock p. m., and all put into cocks before the dew falls. This hay should be put into the barn next day, and well tramped into the mows. This plan can be continued from day to day until all is stored in the barns. Three things must be borne in mind in curing hay by this method:—

First.—Do not cut the grass until dry in the morning.
Second.—Do not allow the fresh cut hay to lie on the ground over night, exposed to dew or rain.
Third.—If any hay should get wet with rain, let it stand in the cocks until thoroughly dry before taking to the barn.

Last season Mr. Glendenning put up some 75 to 80 tons of hay in this way, and reports that it came out of the mows, in the finest condition he ever saw. It was as green as when put into the barn, and the leaves and blossoms were all attached to the stalks. It appeared to have dried out without much heating, as all of the alsike blossoms were pink, and the red clover blossoms were from pink to a light amber color. If any great heat had developed in the mow the blossoms would undoubtedly have been of a dark brown color. No signs of mould were visible and the hay was very free from dust. No salt, lime or other preservative was used.

Two of the mows in which the hay was stored are 22x25 ft., with an average depth of 30 ft. of hay. These mows are tight floored with double inch boards over basement stables. Another mow is 24x36 ft., with a depth of about 24 ft., and the floor on the ground. The outsides of all the mows are of inch boards without battens, with cracks between the boards averaging about three eighths of an inch, just such as are usually found in the ordinary barn. The sides of the mows next the drive floor were open. The hay which consisted of red clover, alsike and a little timothy, was equally good in all parts of the mows. Mr. Glendenning says that he knows of three other farmers who have followed this system for several years with equal success, and it would seem well worthy of trial by our farmers generally.

Among the advantages of this method of curing clover are:—

- (1) The saving of time between cutting and storing in the barn.
- (2) The fact that all of the leaves and blossoms, which are the most valuable portion of the plant, are left on the hay, instead of being lost in the field as is often the case when the ordinary manner of curing is followed.
- (3) The hay is much cleaner and brighter when cured in the old way.

SAFEST PLACE IN THUNDER-STORM.

STAND OR SIT IN THE CENTRE OF THE ROOM.

Many people, and especially women, have a great dread of lightning. For that reason they will not carry bits of metal in their pockets during a storm. Others get as far away from the piano as possible, believing the wires to be a great point of danger. And, there are still others who will not sit near a window.

Professor J. W. Langley, an expert electrical engineer, Cleveland, O., declares all these to be fallacies. He declares that the middle of the room is the safest place during a storm.

"There is a constant tendency on the part of the electricity in the sky to reach the ground," he says. "To do this it must have a conductor. Atmospheric electricity always follows the outside of the conductor or agency that leads it to the ground. That's why the middle of the room is the safest during an electrical storm."

"I know of a number of instances where a bolt of lightning followed the walls of a room, burning it on all four sides, while the people in it, being away from the walls, were only slightly shocked. That is the only safe precaution known to science."

"It is a well-known fact that more people are struck by lightning in the country than in the cities. The reason for this is because the builders have unwittingly safe guarded the cities. Buildings today have tin and copper eaves troughs. Many of the roofs are of metal. Wires are everywhere. All these things are conductors."

"If all the buildings in New York were connected by copper straps it would be absolutely impossible for lightning to strike the city. That is what I mean when I say people in large cities are safe-guarded. Lightning cannot expand itself over an area. It must concentrate itself. It must find the weakest spot. But the city is so generally covered with conductors that there is practically no weakest spot."

"In the country it is different. One tree is higher than the rest. Perhaps there is a stream of water beneath it. That tree is the weakest spot in the wood, and the lightning destroys it. A farmhouse stands in a vacant lot. There are no other houses near. That house is the weakest spot, and there the lightning strikes."

"So my advice to people is that they remain in the centre of the room during every thunder storm. They will be safer there than anywhere else."

FEAR OF THE FUTURE

Most people who dread the future are victims of some terrible disease. Mrs. W. Francis, 204 Colborne St., Kingston, was in a bad state with kidney disease. She had severe pains in back and legs, was gradually losing flesh and felt a dread of the future. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills and the result was a complete cure. There is no medicine more reliable, none so certain to produce a thorough cure. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box.

HALIFAX PRINTERS GO OUT ON A STRIKE.

HALIFAX, July 19.—Some time ago the Halifax Typographical Union notified all employers in this city that after August 1st they would be asked to give increased pay amounting in some cases to fifty per cent. over existing rates. The fight was brought on earlier than anticipated when the Chronicle's entire composing staff went out. The ground of complaint is the employment of Frank Theakston on the monoline machines. Theakston doesn't belong to the union. The Chronicle will bring out the paper all the same to-morrow.

The dinner of the Canadian Club in London on Wednesday night was attended by the colonial premiers now in London and many other distinguished guests. Premier Barton of Australia said he hoped that all obstacles in the way of Newfoundland, joining the Dominion would be removed. Sir Robert Bond, premier of Newfoundland, replying, dwelt upon the great strategic value of Newfoundland, which he said stood as a sentinel at the gateway to the internal waters of Canada. He traced the phenomenal recuperative powers of the island and referred to its present prosperity, declaring the question of confederation to be one of terms. "If," said Sir Roberts, "the terms are advantageous to the people of Newfoundland, I shall feel it my duty to lay proposal before my people, and, if necessary, exert myself to bring the confederation about. We are not jealous of Canada."

HOW IT WAS DONE.

NEW TRICK OF THE BUNCO MAN BY WHICH A PROVINCIALIST LOST HEAVILY.

A man who belongs up the line—a very indefinite phrase—but one which will have to do for the present, as the reporter was unable to learn whether or not he was from Fredericton or Canterbury station, arrived on the American boat Thursday with a sad tale of woe. He had just about enough money left to convey him to the home of his childhood, although when he joined the boat at Boston he had a roll of $135 of the long green. The provincialist has resided in Boston for some time, but evidently was not a student of human nature, and had not taken the gold brick stories and anecdotes of confidence men in the papers seriously. When the gentleman referred to boarded the boat at Boston he bought his ticket, producing a roll of $135. He was almost immediately joined by a young man, who pleasantly inquired if he was going right through, and being answered in the affirmative said "Why that's fine. I'm going on there to join my father's yacht." They formed a steamboat friendship and when they reached Portland they went to a restaurant to dine. It was there a third man joined them. He was a stranger to the provincialist and apparently so to the young man, who spoke of going yachting. After satisfying the cravings of the inner man the stranger who spoke with a foreign accent, got into conversation and made enquiries about Fredericton. The provincialist got his cue then and launched into a description of the Celestial City that would have made the author of the Tourist Association Guide Book take to the swamps. Finally the stranger said he was a man of affluence, not by his own skill or brains, but because a rich relative had bequeathed him a large sum. He showed letters, which proved his story beyond a doubt, and he wanted to accompany him home, he offering to stand the expenses. He didn't appear to know how to count, for he asked the value of $1 bill. After a while he said he would test the honesty of his new friends. He asked the young man who first joined the provincialist in Boston to go and get a cigar. He took out a roll of bills and told the young man to put his money also into a cotton bag and take it with him, remarking, "I'll soon know if you're honest." The young man returned soon with the money and with the cigar, and then it was the provincialist's turn. He likewise placed his money in the bag and then the man of affluence put in his. Handing the provincial man apparently the same bag he asked him to go somewhere. When the man from the provinces returned his two friends were not to be found, but he didn't worry, for he said to himself, "Have I not his money and my own?" He was beginning to think towards evening that it was funny the men should trust him so implicitly when a thought occurred to him that he had better look and see how much he had. He opened the cotton bag and found it full of pieces of paper.

PLASTERS FAILED.

Liniments, Oils and Many Other Medicines Did No Good.

A New Brunswick Postmaster Tells of His Efforts to Cure His Kidney Trouble—He Suffered for Years and Tried Many Medicines, But Only Recently Found the Right One.

LOWER WINDSOR, N. B., July 21. (Special)—Mr. T. H. Belyea, postmaster of this place, has made a very interesting statement of his experience in his efforts to be cured of Kidney Trouble which has bothered him for many years.

At times he would have very bad spells and when these came on he was almost laid up.

He tried several doctors and used many medicines, but nothing seemed to help him in the least.

Plasters, oils, liniments on the outside and doses of all kinds and descriptions taken internally seem to have but one result. He was no better.

Finally through reading an advertisement he was led to the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. He says:

"Dodd's Kidney Pills were so highly recommended for Kidney Trouble that after reading some testimonials, I concluded to try them according to directions.

"I had tried so many things that I was very skeptical and had but little faith that Dodd's Kidney Pills could or would help me. However, I did not use them long before I found that they were all and more than was claimed for them.

"I have received more benefit from them than from any other medicine I have ever used for they seem to have made a complete cure of my case.

"I feel as well as ever I did and have not the slightest trace of the Kidney Trouble that bothered me ever so long.

"I want to say that I believe that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the right medicine for Kidney Trouble."

Mr. Belyea is very well known to everybody in this neighborhood and there are but few who have not been aware of his serious illness.

Everyone is delighted at his improved health and his published statement has done much to make Dodd's Kidney Pills even more popular in this neighborhood than they have been.

Six-year-old Eric found it dull work playing football all alone. Why shouldn't mother play too? There she is sitting sewing in the drawing-room. "Mother, come out and have a game of football with me!"

Six carrier pigeons were expressed to Columbus, Miss., recently from Orestes, Ind., with instructions to be liberated at a certain time. They were set loose one morning at 5 o'clock. One of them became entangled in a mass of telephone wires and took refuge in some trees. The remainder, missing their companion, returned and instituted a search. After locating him they coaxed him to join the procession, and in a body they swiftly flew northwest on their 700-mile journey.
