Miss Eugenie Bourgeois returned from Moncton Saturday.

A great change is taking place in Main St. now. The store formerly occupied by Mr. Ruben Goguen, was taken down, and great preparations are being made for the erection of a large brick building. A tower will be built on the western extremity, which will add greatly to the appearance of the building. On completion this building will probably be occupied by the postmaster, telegraph operator, and a number of other officers.

For Cuts, Wounds, Chilblains, Chapped Hands, Rheumatism, Stiff Joints, Burns Scalds, Bites of Insects, Croup, Coughs Colds, Hagyard's Yellow Oil will be found an excellent remedy. Price 25 cents. All dealers.

THE DELINEATOR FOR JUNE.

The June number of the Delineator leaves nothing to be desired in its fashion in the timeliness of its household matter, in the interest of its literature, and in the beauty of its illustrations. The publication some time ago of an article on Old Blue China aroused such interest and involved so much correspondence, that a supplementary chapter was planned to give collectors the information desired, and appears, fully illustrated, in this number. Portrait Photography of To-Day is interestingly treated by J. C. Abel, and many representative pictures by the leaders of the new school are given. In the athletic series Edwin Sandys, the expert, discusses swimming—its value as an exercise for women, how to become proficient and fancy swimming, a remarkable series of pictures accompanies the article. Marguerite Tracy contributes Five Minutes Grace, a story clever in dialogue and original in plot; and Margaret Whillans Beardsley has written a strong bit of fiction in When Justice Was Appeared. The third paper in Dr. Murray's Series on Child Training deals sympathetically, yet wisely, with the disobedient child and discusses with parents the vexed question of rewards and punishments. The departments present matter of interest for every branch of the household—Summer Furnishings, Cookery, the Garden, etc.; and there are also the ever-entertaining Past-times for Children.

Hindoo Weddings.

Hindoo weddings usually come in the hot months, when the families have leisure to prepare for them, but an astrologer must select an auspicious day for the event. The groom is ready for his preliminary game of diplomacy, which is scarcely more than a "bluff." This is a pretense to visit the sacred Ganges at Benares and wash away his sins in its healing waters. Generally there would not be time before the wedding day to complete such a journey when the groom undertakes it, but the readiness must be shown, and the company sets out. When the bride's father meets them and dissuades the groom from such an undertaking, he is very ready to stop. He is assured, moreover, that his sins have not been so grievous as to need cleansing before his nuptials. If the bride's father is satisfied with his spiritual condition, the young man may need say no more, but he returns and prepares the thall, or gold badge, that all married women must wear suspended from their necks.

Too Realistic.

During a performance of "Captain Lapalisse" at a Valencia theater some years ago an incident occurred which, for lifelike effect, left nothing to be desired. During the said play some of the actors mingle with the spectators in order to co-operate from the body of the house. No sooner had Miralles, the actor, taken his seat in the stalls than a daring pickpocket robbed him of his gold watch. Miralles seized the man by his coat collar and called out in a deep bass voice:

"Police! Help! Thieves!"

The audience, taking this little episode to be part of the performance, roared with laughter. Even the policemen joined in without stirring hand or foot.

"This is no farce!" cried the actor in tones of despair. "The fellow has got my watch!"

The voice sounded so natural that the audience broke into loud applause at "such excellent fooling." Meanwhile the thief managed to break away from his captor and escaped.

Wellington's Coolness.

The Duke of Wellington was one day sitting at his library table when the door opened and without any announcement in stalked a figure of singularly ill omen.

"Who are you?" asked the duke in his short and dry manner, looking up without the slightest change of countenance upon the intruder.

"I am Apollyon. I am sent here to kill you."

"Kill me? Very odd."

"I am Apollyon and must put you to death."

"Bliged to do it today?"

"I am not told the day or the hour, but I must do my mission."

"Very inconvenient; very busy; great many letters to write. Call again or write me word. I'll be ready for you."

The duke then went on with his correspondence. The maniac, appalled probably by the stern, immovable old gentleman, backed out of the room and in half an hour was in an asylum.

Huge English Bedsteads.

The English four posted bedstead was a huge affair. There is one at one of the inns at Ware, a small market town near Hertford, which is large enough to hold a dozen people, and it is one of the curiosities of England. It is referred to in Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night."

It is announced that there is no truth in the reports that General Delarey with three Boer commandoes, has surrendered to the British. The War office received despatches from Lord Kitchener Thursday, but made no mention of surrenders. As a matter of fact, Delarey arrived at Klerksdorp, Southwestern Transvaal, April 24, and his commands, under General Kemp, were arranging to hold a meeting westward of that place during the present week.
