Nervous Headaches

Mrs. Bailey, 632 Queen's Ave., London, Ont, whose husband is with the Globe Cask : Co., states :- "My nervous system was in an exhausted condition. I could not sleep well and suffered a great deal from headaches. Experience has proven to me the remarkable value of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I have found it a splendid tonic and can now say that I am free from headaches. I rest and sleep better than I have for a long time and feel real well in every way.' Nervous headaches can only be permanently cured by enriching the blood and setting the nervous system in perfect order. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is not a relief for headache but a thorough and lasting cure. It creates new, rich blood and nerve force and makes the weak and sickly strong, well and vigorous. It is nature's greatest restorative. 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

FOOD AND THE SEXES.

The Male Human Needs to Eat More Than the Female.

According to a writer in the Lancet, the male human needs more food than the female not only on account of his larger stature, but also because he is the more katabolic of the two. The man tends to expend energy and the woman to store it up in the form of fat; he burns the faster. This sexual difference shows itself in the very blood. The man has a larger percentage of chromocytes than the woman, showing that he needs a proportionately larger quantity of oxygen in order to maintain his more active combustion, a fact which one may associate with his comparative freedom from chlorosis. Moreover, weight for weight, his pulmonary capacity is greater than that of the woman, whose smaller respiratory neel is further shown by the facility with which she can without discomfort diminish her breathing power by means of the corset. "The great contrast between the metabolic activis of the two sexes," continues the writer, "was forcibly brought home to me by a military display given by a troop of dusky amazons, with whom were also a few male On and after Monday, OCT. 21st, warriors. The women, in spite of their plump, some very much so, no single muscle showing through the skin, and it was noticed that their movements. though full of grace, lacked energy and 'go.' The men, on the other hand, were spare, their muscles standing out plainly under the shiny skin, and they, in further contrast with the women, displayed a truly amazing agility, a most astounding fashion. The wonien, in short, were essentially anabolic, and the men were katabolic. I may here draw attention to the fact that men are apt to be larger meat eaters than women, just as they are, possibly in consequence of this very fact, more prone to drink alcohol and to smoke tobacco."

Old John The Carrier

Rugby stared out into the drizzling twilight. The outlook was no less gloomy than his feelings. "If it had been any man on the force but old John Compton, I wouldn't take the thing to heart. But to think of old John being arrested, prosecuted, imprisoned! By heavens, I feel as if it were one of my own flesh and blood."

The young inspector dug the toe of his boot viciously into the thick rug. His elder companion and fellow worker tapped the table nervously.

"The evidence is overwhelming, and yet-well, I suppose we'll have to call him in."

Rugby silently picked up his hat and left the room. The chief leaned back in the great revolving chair and reviewed the case.

John Compton was a widower, residing with his unmarried daughter, and had been a mail carrier for over twen-

"I AM AS INNOCENT AS EITHER OF YOU. ty years. The managers of the Nelson department store, which lay on John's route, claimed that their mail had been systematically robbed of money orders and cash sent loose in letters. Before lodging any complaint they had conducted a small a ective campaign of their own. Twenty letters containing money had been sent to as many places to be forwarded to the concern. Only fifteen came to light. It could not be argued that the missing five had been lost in the mails. The Nelson people pointed the finger of suspicion at old

John had gained white hair and honor in the postal service. During the first ten years of his work there was not a single mark against him. In the second term there was just one-he had been marked "late" because of the illness of his daughter.

Rugby was detailed on the case and prepared ten decoy letters inclosing marked money. He took them to various points within a few miles of the city and had them directed by strange hands. He saw them arrive in the postoffice, saw them placed in the old man's pouch, saw him start out with them. Then he followed the old carrier with a feeling almost self con-

After covering half of his route Compton stopped for ten minutes at his own home, which was in a flathouse. He came out whistling and went on his way. Rugby was seated in a dim nook of the Nelson office when Compton reached the little window and handed over the mail. Instantly he counted the decoy letters. Only six of the ten had been delivered. These were the facts that Inspector

Smith was reviewing as he sat in the dull twilight. When Rugby and Compton entered Smith's office there was a look of wonder in the old man's eyes, but no trace of guilt or anxiety. When told of the charge, he smiled almost childishly. When ordered to empty his pockets, he complied without the least hesitation, yet of the $12 he laid on the table no less than $10 was in the marked money. When this was pointed out to him, his confiding smile vanished, and he turned pale as he

"Why, I got this money only two hours ago. I gave a ten dollar bill in exchange."

"Then of course you can name the party and clear yourself?" asked Smith kindly.

"Of course I can. It-was-was"-There he stopped. A queer change came over his face. His lips quivered like those of a trusting child who had unexpectedly received a blow from the hand it loved. Suddenly he drew himself up and looked from Smith to Rug-

"Do either of you gentlemen believe that I have turned thief in my old age?" "We don't want to believe it," was the reply, "but letters have been stolen, and you have the money that was inclosed in them."

"And yet I am as innocent as either

"I hope so. Where did you chang. the money?"

"I cannot say," he replied, with tight ly compressed lips. "Do you know who took those les

A spasm of pain crossed the old man face, but he quickly recovered. "I do not know."

Smith and Rugby looked at each oth er helplessly. Finally Smith spoke. "You know, of course. Mr. Compton the gravity of this offense and the pen Compton shivered slightly. His voice was firm, but so low that the two in spectors could hardly catch the words "I know the penalty, yes-prison. It's useless to have any trial. I will plend guilty. The less fuss there's over it the easier it will be for-for-others." His voice broke on the last word The inspectors instantly suspected that he was shielding the real culprit. Smith acted quicely. He laid his hand cor dially on Compton's shoulder. "See here, Compton; we can't believe this of you. It's our duty to place you under immediate arrest, but we're going to gim you another chance. We're going to investigate further, and jump the town." The old man seemed terror stricken He avowed his guilt in piteous tones and begged to be arrested, but Smit and Rugby were firm and sent him from their presence a tottering, sob bing man.

we ask only your word that you won't

For the next few days, while John went over his route like one in a dream. Rugby investigated the life of the old carrier's daughter. He quickly discovered that she dressed far above her station and income and indulged in several expensive vices. Marked bills were traced directly to her, and when taxed by Rugby she broke down and confessed. Every morning when her father stepped into the kitchen for the cup of coffee which seemed to strengthen him during the remainder of his route she had rifled the mail bag as it hung on the entry rack. Rugby and his chief realized that the disgrace of the daughter would be as fatal to the old man as his own arrest, and for once they failed in their official duty. They forced the woman to sell her jewels, which were one of the passions of her life. With the proceeds they made good the losses of the Nel

She had been recklessly mad for money, and had neither thought nor cared for the gray haired man who fairly worshiped her and was willing to go to prison for her sake. But now she seemed to dread the sight of his white hair, the loving gaze in his eyes. She finally went to Denver, ostensibly to visit friends. She never came back Old John, who had been simply told that the real culprit had been discovered, lived on the letters he received from Denver. If he realized that the inspectors knew the truth, he never gave any evidence of the fact. He died before the daughter, who had plunged into reckless dissipation in the far west and had sunk too low to write the longed for letter, and he never knew that strange hands, the hands of men who worked with him and loved him, would at last lay him to rest and rear the shaft above his lonely grave.

Chinese Can Sleep.

Generally speaking, the Chinaman is able to sleep anywhere. None of the trifling disturbances which drive us to despair annoys him. With a brick for a pillow he can lie down on his bed of stalks or mud bricks or rattan and sleep the sleep of the just, with no recerence to the rest of creation. He does not want his room darkened, nor does he require others to be still. The "infant crying in the night" may continue to cry for all he cares, for it does not disturb him.

In some regions the entire population seem to fall asleep as by a common instinet, like that of the hibernating bear, during the first two hours of summer afternoons, and they do this with regularity, no matter where they may be. At two hours after noon the universe at such seasons is as still as at two hours after midnight. In the case of most working people at least and also in that of many others position in sleep is of no sort of conse-

The Grace of Abhorrence. The duty of abhorring evil is one that is general in its nature. It admits of no exception of favored vices. We are very liable to excuse the sins which we "are inclined to" while roundly condemning those we "have no mind to." It is one of the weaknesses of poor human nature that if a sin is agreeable to us we discover or invent excuses for it. It is not so bad as some other sins: indeed, in our case, it is not certain that it is a sin at all. We have a certain right to do what we would blame others for doing or we even say to ourselves that it is merely conventional wrong, but is in fact no real wrong. Whatever is wrong without exception in our own favor we ought to cultivate the grace of abhorring it, for we may be certain that if we allow ourselves an easy sentiment of allowance for any sin we have taken down the bars to its commission and one sin being made easy opens the way to another and another until the conscience is seared as with a hot iron.-Pittsburg

HOW IS YOUR MOWER?

It does'nt pay to use an old worn out one. It does'nt pay to buy an inferior new one. It pays to buy the best. The best is the McCormick Vertical Lift. With it you can raise your cut terbar perpindicular ni a moment without getting off your seat and in doing so you throw your mower out of gear automatically. No other mower possesses this feature, no other mower has so strong, simple and serviceable a foot-lift. No other ne wer has a draft-rod pulling so directly from the inside shoe. No other mower has so strong a frame. No other mower has such perfectgears. No other mower is so easily handled by man and team. No other mower runs in the same class. McCormick Harvesting Machines have been manufactured for seventy one years, and to-day more than two millions of them are in use in every corner of the world. I have McCormick Mower Rakes, Reapers and Binders and the price is right. Examin them closely and compare with others. Call and see my stock of repairs.
