

HOUSE OF LORDS, Aug. 16.

Prorogation of Parliament.—The House was thrown open at two o'clock, and notwithstanding the lateness of the season, the galleries displayed much fashion and beauty. Abroad it was otherwise, neither the fineness of the day, nor the importance of the ceremony attracted the public. The crowd was very thin indeed, but orderly and respectful. The King was cheered, the carriages of distinguished reformers greeted with applause, but all was cold and dead. The King looked well, and walked to the throne with a firm step. The Speaker, (for the last time,) headed the commons, presented the Appropriation Bill, and read the retrospect of the session. The King then spoke as follows:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

The state of the public business now enabling me to release you from a further attendance in Parliament, I cannot take leave of you without expressing the satisfaction with which I have observed your diligence and zeal in the discharge of your duties during a session of extraordinary labour and duration.

The matters which you have had under your consideration, have been of the first importance; and the laws in particular which have been passed for reforming the representation of the people, have occupied, as was unavoidable, the greatest portion of your time and attention.

In recommending this subject to your consideration, it was my object by removing the causes of just complaint, to restore general confidence in the Legislature, and to give additional security to the settled institutions of the state. This object will, I trust, be found to have been accomplished.

I still have to lament the continuance of disturbances in Ireland, notwithstanding the vigilance and energy displayed by my government there, in the measures which it has taken to repress them. The laws which have been passed, in conformity with my recommendation, at the beginning of the session, with respect to the collection of Tithes, are well calculated to lay the foundation of a new system, to the completion of which the attention of Parliament, when it again assembles, will of course be directed.

To this necessary work my best assistance will be given, by enforcing the execution of the laws, and by promoting the prosperity of a country blessed by Divine Providence with so many natural advantages. As conducive to this object, I must express the satisfaction which I have felt at the measures adopted for extending generally to my people in that kingdom, the benefit of Education.

I continue to receive the most friendly assurances from all Foreign Powers; and, although I am not enabled to announce to you the final arrangement of the questions which have been so long pending between Holland and Belgium, and though unhappily the contest in Portugal between the Princes of the House of Braganza still continues, I look with confidence through the intimate union which subsists between me and my Allies, to the preservation of general peace.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

I thank you for the supplies which you have granted to me, and it is a great satisfaction to me to find, notwithstanding large deductions from the revenue occasioned by the repeal of some taxes which pressed most heavily on my people, that you have been enabled, by the exercise of a well-considered economy in all the departments of the State, to provide for the service of the year, without any additions of the public burdens.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I recommend to you during the recess, the most careful attention to the preservation of the public peace, and to the maintenance of the authority of the law in your respective counties. I trust that the advantages enjoyed by all my subjects under our free constitution will be duly appreciated and cherished; that relief, from any real cause of complaint, will be sought only through legitimate channels; that all irregular and illegal proceedings will be discountenanced and resisted; and that the establishment of internal tranquillity and order will prove that the measures which I have sanctioned will not be fruitless in promoting the security of the State, and the contentment and welfare of my people.

So great is the present arrear of causes in the Court of King's Bench, that professional men calculate that no man bringing an action can expect to have it tried within a shorter period than eighteen months.—Morning Herald.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—By accounts from Oporto, we learn that Don Miguel's fleet had returned to the Tagus, on the 18th, and some degree of disappointment is felt, that Admiral Sartorius should not have succeeded in capturing some of his vessels. The fact, however, of the enemy's fleet leaving is considered as a favourable tendency, as it leaves the coast clear for landing stores, &c.
