

THE MONITOR

If you are angry with him that reproves your sin, you secretly confess your anger to be unjust; he that is angry with the just reprover, kindles the fire of the just avenger.

Anger may repast with you for an hour, but not repose with you for a night. The continuance of anger is hatred; the continuance of hatred becomes malice; that anger is not warrantable that has suffered the sun to set on it.

Nothing is more despicable, or more miserable, than the old age of a passionate man. When the vigour of a youth fails him, and his amusements pall with frequent repetition, his occasional rage sinks, by decay of strength into peevishness; that peevishness, for want of novelty and variety, becomes habitual; the world falls off from around him; and he is left, as Homer expresses it, to devour his own heart in solitude and contempt.

The discretion of a man defereth his anger, and it is his glory to pass by a transgression.

He that lets the sun go down upon his wrath, and goes angry to bed, is like to have the devil for his bed-fellow.

When I have an injury done me, I never set the beacon on fire, nor am I troubled: I consider who did it; if my kinsman he did it ignorantly; if my friend, he did it against his will; if my enemy, it is no more than I expected; I ever put a fair construction upon any thing that happens to me.

He that is naturally revengeful, keeps his wounds open; which otherwise would close of themselves.

Pardon is a glorious kind of revenge; I think myself sufficiently revenged of my enemy if I pardon him. Cicero did more commend Cæsar for pardoning Metellus, than for the great victory obtained against his enemies.

Catch not too soon at an offence, nor give too easy way to anger; the one shows a weak judgement, the other a perverse nature.

Hath any wounded you with injuries, meet them with patience; hasty words rankle the wound, soft language dresses it, forgiveness cures it, and oblivion takes away the fear.

Of all passions there is none so extravagant and outrageous as that of anger; other passions solicit and mislead us, but this runs away with us by force, hurries us as well to our own as to another's ruin; it falls many times upon the wrong person, and discharges itself upon the innocent instead of the guilty, and makes the most trivial offences to be capital, and punisheth an inconsiderate word perhaps with fetters, infamy or death; it allows a man neither time nor means for defence, but judges a cause without hearing it, and admits of no meditation: it spares neither friend or foe, but tears all to pieces, and casts human nature into a perpetual state of war.

Have not to do with any man in his passion, for men are not like iron to be wrought upon when they are hot.

Argue not with a man whom you know to be of an obstinate humour; for when he is once contradicted, his mind is barred up against all light information; arguments though never so well grounded, do but provoke him, and make even him afraid to be convinced of the truth.

He is a mad man, that, to avoid a present and less evil, runs blindfold into a greater; and, for the gratifying of a forward humor, makes himself a slave all the days of his life.
