

des Chambres, of last night, maintains that all other questions are of no importance compared with this; and it concludes a long article by stating that 'the abandonment of Algiers, in exciting the liveliest indignation throughout France will be an act of the utmost flagrant treason against Louis Philippe.'

THE CHOLERA.

The official bulletin of to-day is somewhat more satisfactory. On Wednesday there were 137 deaths in the hospitals—308 in private houses; total 445. This is a diminution of 80 on the number of the day before.

The report of the deaths at Paris yesterday will not be published till to-morrow, but it is generally believed that they are considerably less.

In the city of Norwich there were, a few weeks ago, no less than twelve thousand persons, out of a total population of 70,000, receiving parochial relief! In one parish the rates amount to no less than thirty shillings in the pound.

DREADFUL HURRICANE IN INDIA.

Extract from a private letter dated November 10, from the neighbourhood of Balasore:—

I can think of nothing but the hurricane which occurred here on the last day of October; such a calamity I never heard or read of; at least 10,000 persons in my jurisdiction were drowned, and I fear the accounts will show double that number, including children. The high road from Madras to Calcutta runs through Balasore, about six miles north of this, and where it is in a direct line nine miles from the coast, the sea crossed it, carrying with it every living thing in that space, in that direction. At least 150 square miles were inundated, from 10 to 15 feet deep. The sea came up to Balasore; and to the northward also the inundation was little less. The deck and part of a vessel are on the road. Where the sea crossed it on the west side and where its progress was checked by the road on the east side, are lying all dead and heaped together, men, tigers, buffaloes, cows, &c. I have sent out hundreds of people to burn and bury, but if it does not breed a pestilence we shall be lucky; it is not easy to dispose of bodies covering miles. My house, at Bulramghurree, is in the sea; though it stood high, the flood passed over it. Had we been there, we should have seen as much as any one saw in the flood, but not a being would have lived to tell the tale. Not receiving any intelligence from a part of my establishment stationed near the coast, at a place you will find in the map called Dumach, I sent out persons to ascertain how they had fared; they report that for three miles inland, where my Bungalow cottage was, all was silence and death; that bodies of men and cattle were seen; not a house or vestige of life remained; that they found not a being to question—all was still. No one saw the invader. The sun had gone down before he left the bed to which hitherto he had always been confined: before dawn he had returned to it, but his visit, though unseen, will never be forgotten by the few who heard his approach and survived. Towards evening it was evident to me that we were about to have such a night as I had never before seen. The wind blew in gusts, now still, now half a hurricane. I made all fast within, and moved my children into the centre of the house. I then went to my stables, had my horses fed, and then turned round in their stalls, ordering my people not to fasten them, but stand by them, and as soon as the building began to shake to let them all loose, and run to the house themselves. They did so. When I went next to the stable there was not one brick left on another. One of my horses was caught three miles off, but all were saved. The wind burst some of the doors and windows of the house open. When that happened the noise exceeded all description. Chairs, tables, &c., all flying about in every direction. My guard-house blown down, and three Sepoys buried; I got out two alive. Every thing about my house is destroyed. The trees with which I had taken so much pains for four years, torn up, or blown away. What was a garden now looks like a barren heath.

Lady Wyndham mother of Lord Durham, who died at 17, Queen street, May Fair, on Saturday morning, fell a victim to the prevailing epidemic. She was seized on Friday with the most alarming symptoms, and her medical attendants had no hesitation in deciding on the character of the disease. The case was reported to the board of Health, and was included in the official. Her remains were interred yesterday morning according to the regulations of the board of Health.
