It was the antimeter of the Boat during the last the wretched management of the Boat during the the antimajorities that the wretched management of the Boat during the bast year had forfeited all claims that the company hight have had upon the liberality of the Legislature. The had been often stopped for days—weeks—and the had been often stopped for days—weeks—and the forfeiture of the charter had only been avoided by running her over once in three months. The disappointment to the country people had been much, that dozens of leasing were sometimes detained at Darrmouth for a considerable time; others had to retrace their steps hound the Basyn—and so great had been the difficulty and dilly, which the negligence of the company had decasioned, that the people ceased to travel the eastern road, and it would be a long time before confidence in the regularity of the Boat could be again lestored. The Company had already received an constant of the could not, or would not, keep up a sufficient ferry, they ought to throw up their charter, and make the Bouth of the could not, or would not, keep up a sufficient ferry, they ought to throw up their charter, and make the Bouth of the could not, or would not, keep up a sufficient ferry, they ought to throw up their charter, and make the Bouth of the Boat, were not such as could be foreseen or movided. obtain the gran. They insisted that the casualities which had occasioned the stoppage of the Boat, were not such as could be foreseen or provided sainst—that the Company had sunk an immense two, each member being £500 out of poeket; that such arrangements had now been made, as would entire tegularity, and that therefore the company was entitled to the usual grant. On the question being but, the sum was refused.
