

to do anything for him. I made an incision about three inches below the right groin, and passed a probe about two inches in the direction of the abdomen, where I conceived the principal cause of his suffering to be, but found no discharge. I again inserted the probe in the same direction, passing as near the Cruralis artery as safety would warrant, about two and a half inches further than the first attempt, when a great quantity of the foetid pus followed the withdrawal of the probe. I then stopped the orifice of the wound with prepared sponge tent—Spongia præparata. I attended and dressed the wound twice a day for three days, when the swelling of the thigh was totally reduced, but the inflammation of the leg and foot still continued. The deceased then informed me that he had, about fifteen years ago, received a contusion on his right leg, which he insisted I should open. I made an incision in the leg to the bone three inches in length—the bone was but little deceased, but the flesh of the leg was one mass of corruption. I was then morally certain his case was hopeless, and told him so in presence of many, who will in a Court of Justice, attest to what I have stated. After this I attended the deceased twenty three days twice a day. When, by a fall from a carriage, my shoulder was dislocated, and the upper part of the os-humeri fractured, which disabled me to give the deceased any more attention; but a young man, now in study with me, attended him until he died. I may here observe that at the post mortem examination of the medical gentlemen, who attended at the Inquest, they found the head of the right Os Femoris, and the great Trochanter, and the lesser Trochanter much carioused and wanting, and in rapid progress of decomposition, which must have convinced, and no doubt did, every one who knew anything of the case, that poor Campbell's pulse ere many hours, must cease to beat for ever.

The envious part of the profession, and others, for reasons which I have yet to learn, have called in question, and even denied my authority to practice professionally, but if the degrees of London, and a second Diploma which I hold, and can be seen by any respectable person calling upon me for such purpose—will sanction my practice, I am all right, for at this moment there are several gentlemen examining both my Diplomas, and other credentials connected with them. I found, when I first went to Canada, that it was necessary to pass the Medical Board there, before I could practice. I did so, and obtained there a second Diploma, after an examination before the Medical Board of Quebec, of which the following is a literal copy:—

Quebec, 29th June, 1818.
The Petition of James Richard Cotton, to practice Surgery, Medicine, &c., referred to the Board appointed by His Excellency the Governor in Chief, in Quebec, for examinations, and report concerning his character, fitness and capacity, under the requirements of the Law. By virtue of his Excellency the Governor in Chief.

(Signed) Andrew Wm. Cochran.
We have examined Mr James R. Cotton, and find him qualified to practice his profession.

(Signed) J. Wright, M. D., Pt.
William Holmes, M. D.
Thomas Lloyd,
William Hackett, M. D.

Quebec, 3rd July, 1818.
True copy from the original.
I shall conclude this communication by observing, that I shall always hold myself in readiness to examine or be examined, Medically or Surgically, by any gentleman who has come regularly by his profession, and the vanquished be bound to pay to the victor One Hundred Pounds lawful money of New Brunswick.

Yours respectfully,
JAMES R. COTTON, Surgeon.
