streets, but we saw nothing to give any alarm. On the following morning the prisoners gave themselves up, when John Allen, John Robinson, and William Wright, Esquires, the newly appointed Magistrates, came down, and examined five witnesses, on the part of the Crown, all of whom were in the Kirk that day, John Mackie, of Douglastown, being one, when the magistrates discharged the prisoners without calling on them for a defence.

The foregoing statement can be proved substantially, I should therefore recommend the proprietor of the Loyalist to be very cautious how he takes for granted what may be communicated to him respecting me. It is easy for the proprietor of a newspaper to wound, but it is hardly to wound without the shadow of a cause, and particularly one who never gave any offence to him, nor yet in the matter under consideration, and all the comment I have to make is, that the person who communicated the particulars to the Loyalist, took great pains to communicate the greatest and basest falsehoods that could be invented by the vilest wretch that can be found at large in the county of Northumberland. Several other communications have appeared in the Loyalist since the Election, all of which shall, so far as I am concerned, have my attention, and their vile authors shall have to plead at the bar of public opinion.

The article in the last Loyalist was evidently intended to bring me into disrepute with the respectable congregation of St. Andrew's Church; but I trust I have always shown a proper regard for that Church, many of its members being my most particular friends.

Mr. Editor, I must beg pardon for trespassing so much on your valuable time, but could not give a fair account of what came under my observation in a more summary way.

I remain, yours truly,

JOHN T. WILLISTON.

Chatham, 8th Sept. 1843.

P. S.—It appeared from the evidence taken before the Magistrates on the examination of the two prisoners, that there were only two men more in sight at the time, except the congregation, and it was not pretended by any one that there were more.

with the facts, may be considered as a reflection on me in my magisterial capacity,—therefore for the purpose of letting the public know the true state of the case, I shall endeavour to give such a statement as can, if necessary, be proved. The troops having arrived on the Saturday previous to the day in question, I was led to believe that persons who had not ventured across the River before, since the Election, would come over. I therefore did not go to Church, but went on the street in front of the public landing at Peabody's slip; I saw a boat coming to the slip from the opposite side of the river, and as she approached the slip, I saw three men go down in that direction; I said to Mr. Michael Samuel I was fearful they intended mischief, and requested him to accompany me; before we reached the slip, two men stepped out of the boat, and immediately one fell, whether from a blow or false step I cannot say, but he got up and returned into the boat. I helped all the females out, and it was with some difficulty I prevented the men from receiving injury. The boat pushed off with the men in her, and I accompanied one of the females down to the ship yard, where Mr. Henry Wyse was kind enough to offer his assistance to see her to the Church; she complained of nervousness. I then returned to Mr. Peabody's wharf, and was there joined by P. Williston, Esq., and Mr. Michael Samuel. We had not been long there, till we observed a boat pulling down from the direction of Douglastown towards the Church. Mr. Samuel got his spy glass, and with it we watched the boat, until she went out of sight below the ship yard, and in a few minutes she pulled out into the stream, when I observed she had discharged her passengers, I said all is right. Very shortly after, we saw a number of persons on the rising ground near the Church, and to appearance, in commotion, but looking through the glass, we saw women and children, which induced me to think that nothing was the matter. In a few minutes, George Kerr, Esq., came on the wharf and said "Williston, get the troops, there is bad work at the Kirk." I said "what is the matter?" he said he did not know, he had been told so. I with several went down to see what was doing, when I met Doctor Key in his gig, coming up with speed; he said Williston, come down, there is bad work at the Kirk. I got in the gig with him, and went down; when we got there, we found the congregation standing about, with two men in charge as prisoners, for attempting to prevent the persons in the boat from landing. I then got out of the gig, and ordered six men to take the prisoners to my office, to be examined. Doctor Key very kindly accompanied me to the office. The prisoners were put into the office, and they were the only persons allowed in, but myself and P. Williston, Esq. I ordered the persons who brought them up, together with all respectable persons, to line the doorway and steps, to prevent any persons going in, or the prisoners out. I then requested Doctor Key to drive up for Luke Pike, a constable; he returned, and said that Pike was in the Chapel. I then asked Dr. Key to drive down for such persons as could give any information against the men in charge.

While he was gone, the people outside said that while the men were prisoners at the Kirk, that one John Carruthers, as well as others, had thrown stones at them; this they had complained of on their way up, and said they were ready to enter on their examination, as they had done no harm. Mr. Carruthers was one of the persons that escorted them to the office; and from what the persons complained of, that of his throwing stones, the persons on the street used some threats towards him, I considered it prudent to allow him to go into the office, which he did; another person said to me he was apprehensive of being ill-treated, and asked me to allow him to go away, which I did. Before Dr. Key returned, a very large collection of persons took place in the street, and I saw that a feeling began to shew itself, which very soon became such as that they demanded the prisoners to be set at liberty, and a rush was made towards the office. I looked the door inside, on which P. Williston said to me, "open the door, and speak to the people." Mr. Carruthers said to me, "for God's sake, save me;" I took him through an inside door, and concealed him, and returned to the office, and found the prisoners gone. I went out on the street, and shortly after saw the prisoners; they said they did not wish to escape, and would give themselves up on Monday morning for the purpose of being examined. While on the street, I heard sufficient to convince me that injury was intended towards the persons who had been accused of throwing stones at the prisoners. I considered it prudent to go down, and accordingly took P. Williston, Esq. and several constables with me, to prevent any injury being done. When we got there, we saw several persons sitting on logs, about one hundred yards from the Church; we ascertained, in a way that left no doubt on my mind, that evil was intended, and that with the constables at hand, we could not prevent it. At this time Dr. Key came down in his gig; I asked him to take P. Williston, Esq., up to where the Troops were stationed, and I requested P. Williston to ask Captain Steele to allow his men to come down, as a precautionary measure, till the people could leave the Church; on their way up, I believe they met with Colonel Allen, who took the trouble to ask Captain Steele to allow the Troops to go down. Nothing further occurred till I was in bed, when Colonel Robinson and Mr. Michael Samuel asked to see me. Mr. Robinson asked me if I thought there was any danger to be apprehended. I said I knew of none. I asked him if he had heard any thing to cause alarm; he said nothing, only that the streets were so very quiet, he was fearful something was brewing, and as a precautionary measure, he had sent for a few of the troops stationed at Newcastle, to come down. I accompanied him and Mr. Samuel about the streets, but we saw nothing to give any alarm. On the following morning the prisoners gave themselves up, when John Allen, John Robinson, and William Wright, Esquires, the newly appointed Magistrates, came down, and examined five witnesses, on the part of the Crown, all of whom were in the Kirk that day, John Mackie, of Douglastown, being one, when the magistrates discharged the prisoners without calling on them for a defence.

St. John New Brunswick, Sept. 2. Key West.—The following paragraph is published in the St. Augustine Herald of the 14th ultimo:—"We are credibly informed that within a short time a British brig of war, named the harbour of Key West, and without communicating with the shore, proceeded to take a survey of that port. The British Consul went on board, and was informed by the Commander that he had been ordered to survey the harbour by order of the Admiral on the Halifax station, and that as soon as he could make report, there would be a considerable force assembled there. Inquiry was made of the Consul whether he had heard of an insurrection in the island of Cuba. These are occurrences that are seemingly portentous. What the designs of the British government may be in this particular remains to be seen; but we cannot doubt she has a design upon the island of Cuba."

St. John, Observer, September 5. The Governor General has stated to the citizens of Montreal that Her Majesty's Government will be guided by the wishes of a majority of the Legislature as to the place for establishing the seat of Government in Canada. Quebec and Toronto are excluded, not being central. It is expected that the Legislature will make choice of Montreal, and that the approaching session of Parliament will be the last that will assemble at Kingston.

The Governor General left Quebec for Three Rivers, on the 28th. Thence he was to cross the St. Lawrence and proceed through the town of Montreal.

Mail by the St. George:

The Steamer arrived this morning at eight o'clock. The papers obtained by her contain news of consequence.

A writer in the Picton Eastern Chronicle, says, that the Crops in the river John "look particularly well, and the industrious farmer will if early frosts do not prevent it, have a large return of produce for the reward of his labours."

The Charlottetown Gazette states, that the No. of a new paper bearing the title of The Canadian, was issued in that town on Monday last.

The Novascotian reports that a most furious storm was experienced at Yarmouth on the 20th inst.

Boston.—The papers in this city furnish the particulars of a most disastrous row which took place there on the evening of Sunday, the 20th inst. A body of sailors and negroes were the actors. Many severe injuries were received.

Davidson, Jr., Peter Porter, Thomas C. Allan, William Letson, John Porter, Phineas Williston, Alex. Goodwin, James L. Underhill, John McDonald, moved by Mr. Justice Wright, and Resolved unanimously,—

That it is the imperative duty, not only of the Magistrates, but of every well disposed and subject of the Queen, to discountenance and put down by every means in their power, the malicious party spirit which has of late been prevalent in this County—to endeavour to re-establish friendly intercourse between the inhabitants on both sides of the river, and to bring to condign punishment all who shall resist the legal authorities, or the promotion of peace and good order.

Resolved,—That a Committee be appointed to consider the propriety of organizing a Constabulary force for the County, and to report on the subject to a Special Session to be held by the Committee for that purpose, as early a period as possible; and further resolved, that Messrs. Justice Fraser, John T. Williston, Allison and Porter, with the Clerk of the Peace, be a Committee for that purpose.

Resolved unanimously, That the thanks of the Court be due to His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, for the solicitude he has shown in having sent a military force in aid of the peace, and for their protection.
