

remains of the late Captain Pipon, Royal Engineers, to be here interred in a manner befitting his rank and station in life.

Having been appointed an associate Commissioner with him on the Boundary Question, as well as on the Railway Exploration Survey, and having been personally on the spot since the fatal accident, it devolves on me to state that his life, so valuable to his friends and the service, fell a sacrifice in the endeavour to save a fellow creature. After the canoe had overset, Captain Pipon and the Canoe-men, swam to the shore, which they reached in safety. The former on gaining his footing seeing the fisherman in a canoe which they had passed at the head of the Rapids a considerable distance off, and that the boy with his head just above the water, and clinging to the bow of the canoe, was being rapidly carried down the stream; immediately plunged again into the rapid and swam straight for the canoe. He found however from the weight of his clothes and the strength of the water that he could not reach it, and he turned to regain the shore; scarcely had he done so, when he suddenly gave up swimming, his hands paddled convulsively above his head and the strong deep waters swept him down, and although the man who had swam ashore with him at first seeing his danger at once plunged into the water, his efforts to reach him were fruitless, and he sunk to rise no more to this life.

It will be a source of melancholy satisfaction to his friends that although he met his death in so distant a settlement, and far from all he knew or loved, that every care and attention was bestowed on the melancholy occasion; and to Mr. H. Ramsay of Dalhousie we must all feel indebted for his disinterested kindness in undertaking a painful and hazardous journey up the Restigouche River in search of me, thereby enabling me to reach Campbelltown in time to discharge the last sad duties to the deceased, in a manner that would be, to the best of my judgment, in accordance with feelings of his family and brother officers.

Our thanks are also due to A. Ritchie, Esq., of Campbelltown, and the many Gentlemen there and at Dalhousie for the kindness and attention displayed on the sad occasion, and to none, I feel assured, will his friends feel more indebted than to Your Excellency and his many friends here, who have shown so much respect for his memory, and deep sorrow for the awful and sudden departure of one so gifted.

I have, &c.

EDMOND Y. W. HENDERSON,
Lieutenant Royal Engineers.

From the Greenock Advertiser, October 9.

The Marchioness of Clydesdale, Ferguson, which arrived here on Saturday night, from Shediac, in 21 days, left that port on the 11th ultimo, and on the 29th was overtaken by a dreadful hurricane, that lasted 16 hours, and carried away the sails, boats, bulwarks, deck load, and seriously injured the rudder of the ship. On the second morning after the storm, fell in with the schooner Count de Paris, from the Grand Bank of Newfoundland, with a cargo of fish for Rochelle, in a sinking state, and took off the Master and ten men; the mate and three of the crew having been washed overboard on the previous day. The highest praise is due to Captain Ferguson, Mr Dick, Mate, and all the crew of the Marchioness of Clydesdale, for the humanity and bravery which they displayed on the occasion, their own vessel being under double-reefed topsails, the gale continuing with severity, and in the face of all peril, the master bore down to the relief of the schooner, while the mate, in company with three of the crew, launched the long boat, and reached with difficulty the stern of the sinking vessel, from which the surviving crew dropped one by one into the boat, and happily all reached the Marchioness in safety. The crew immediately put themselves on allowance, having lost the greater part of their supply of water, and dreading in their disabled state a more tedious voyage than usual. On the afternoon of the same day, fell in with the brig Agneda, from Glasgow, for Miramichi, under jury masts, and being short of water, wished to be supplied. She had been overtaken by the same hurricane, and lost all her masts and water. The captain intimated his intention of abiding by the ship, and prosecuting his voyage. The Marchioness having shared a similar calamity in the loss of water, and being on allowance, with an increase of hands, it was impossible to render the slightest aid in this respect. During the remainder of the passage, strong gales continued from South West to North West. The French crew on arrival immediately proceeded to Glasgow, on their way home.

Switzerland.—Geneva, October 28.—The new Government has entered upon and continued the exercise of its functions, without any attempt being made by its adversaries to oppose it. With the exception of the two bridges that were burned, the town contains no traces whatever of having been so recently the scene of a revolution. Between the citizens of different parties not the slightest ill-will appears to exist. All, or nearly all, the functionaries of the deposed Government have been maintained in their places and the very same militia that the present Government fought against, with arms in their hands, has been reinstated. The elections of members of the Grand Council have given an overwhelming majority of the Radical party, i.e., to that now in power. From this we are bound to assume that the late revolution has obtained the sanction of the great mass of the people, and is not the work of a turbulent minority, as some people and some journals may have led you to expect.

There have been no disturbances in other cantons, with the exception of Bale where some disorders took place in consequence of the dearth of bread. The Catholic cantons are understood to be prepared to act together; but nothing thus far has occurred to put them in hostility to Geneva.
