The varieties of the verbena growing in the warm and temperate regions of the Western world are numerous. The parti-cular species referred to above is that known to botanists by the name of verbena jamaicensis. It is a native of the West India islands, as well as of the continent. There are two kinds of it—the male and the female; the latter is the one used as ahove. It has long been known to the creole population of Spanish America for its medicinal virtue. They have used it as a febrifuge and an unfailing specific in cases of dysentery. It is generally given to children as a tea mixed with dren as a tea, mixed with sugar and milk, and is by no means a disagreeable beverage. the expressed juice of the plant forms a cooling purge for children in fevers. The vervain is likewise a remedy of particular note in sundry maladies that defy ordinary medicines. Sloane says that a decoction of it cures dropsies; Hughes, that it is a powerful deobstruent; according to Barham, it is likewise an excellent vermifuge. And, having now been discovered as a cure for yellow fever, the shrub must in future rank as a still more valuable addition to the pharmacopæia.—Boston Courier.

The Court meets again on Monday, upon which day the Sheriff is to show cause why he should not be fined for his error. COUNTY ALBERT MINES.

A portion of the Halifax papers contain a report of the trial between the Company now working the mine in the above-named county and Dr. Gesner. After a protracted trial of ten days, the Judge charged in favor of the Plaintiff, and the Jury returned a verdict accordingly.

As the question at issue has created considerable interest throughout this section of the Province. we publish below a portion of the charge of His Honor Judge

I will now direct your attention to the main feature of this case presented for your decision. The question you have to determine, gentlemen, is, whether this article is coal or not. Whether it is a mineral, is a question with which you have nothing to do; and I was rather surprised at the learned Counsel engaging your attention so largely on that point, after I had distinctly stated that I would reserve it for the decision of a full Bench; and here I may take occasion to say, that having given my opinion on the subject-such a hasty opinion as a Judge is often called upon to give on points of law which arise in the progress of of different cases; yet I shall not be at all All persons having legal demands against afraid or ashamed, to change that opinion, the Estate of WILLIAM CRANE, Esquire, late of Sackville, deceased, are requested to render the same, duly attested, to the Subscribers, within six months from this date. On the one side they assert that it is coal-on the other, that it is Asphaltum; but the evidence on both sides is conclusive that it must be one or other of these two substances. If it is not coal, it will pass, as far as your decision is concerned, to Dr. Gesner, with the soil, of which he is the lessee. The point is a very singular one to be brought in a Court of Justice. I have known such incidental questions to arise frequently in medical and scientific actly similar to this. Singular however, as this case is, it is not more singular than the testimony which has been given, from Remon for the Yellow Fever.—The bark Mandaria, which arrived on Tuesnewspapers of British Guiana contain accounts of the discovery of a remedy for
