

Russian detachment crossed the Danube, and advanced as far as Babadagh. The Russians captured 83 Turks and one flag. After this the whole Russian detachment returned to Ismail, in Bessarabia. The Turks had a few men killed, and the Russians also suffered a small loss. This is the truth of the passage of the Danube, which has caused such a sensation.

Brailow, Jan. 12.—The number of Russians who have entered the Dobruzcha is 20,000 men. 15,000 men, with 50 guns are advancing towards Baltschik.

Endeavours to obtain an armistice.—We learn from Vienna and Berlin that great efforts are at this moment brought to bear to obtain the consent of the Western Powers to an armistice. The Emperor Napoleon's address to the Imperial Guards, the reinforcements sent by England, and the treaty which France and England have concluded with Sardinia, have been regarded at Berlin and St. Petersburg as evidences of an intention to complete the work commenced before Sebastopol, irrespective of the general professions, more or less sincere, made in the name of the Czar. The Berlin cabinet is urging with peculiar earnestness the necessity of suspending hostilities until the belligerents shall have pursued further the recent endeavour to arrive at an understanding. It is believed that the recent irruption of Russian troops into the Dobruzcha was mainly intended to demonstrate to the Allies that the advantages offered by an armistice were not monopolised by Russia. It is not certain that the Austrian Government was not a party to the manoeuvre.

Affair at Balaklava.—We have received, says the Pays, a letter of the 5th from Constantinople. A column of riflemen has taken possession of the important position of Camara, near Balaklava, after driving out the Russians who occupied it. The enemy in this affair experienced severe losses, they were completely put to the rout and fled precipitately, burning their forage and tents.—The loss of the Russians at Sebastopol and the neighbourhood during the last days of December is estimated at more than 5000 men.

Prince Menschikoff (says the correspondence of the Allgemeine Zeitung) can with difficulty feed the troops around him, and yet he incessantly demands reinforcements, more especially since he had ascertained with certainty, that a Turkish corps of 30,000 or 40,000 men strong will be landed at Koslov (Eupatoria). The Turks will play there the role performed a short time ago by Liprandi, in his position to the rear of Balaklava. As the operations of the allies were checked and hemmed in by Liprandi, so will the movements of Menschikoff be restricted and hampered. Every vulnerable point is, therefore, being looked to, and the works of defence around Perekop and Simpheropol are being recommended with vigour.

The forces which are being dispatched to Prince Menschikoff are anything but choice troops; all those that could be spared here and in Bessarabia are already in Sebastopol. If the troops already at the onset of their march have no imposing aspect, what a scene of misery must they present on arriving at their destination! It is impossible to describe the extreme hardships over which these poor fellows must triumph. Hitherto waggons were employed in transporting them, but that is now utterly impossible, as the frost has not even improved the condition of the roads. I am assured that above 10 per cent. of the expeditions sink on the road from hunger and exhaustion, never again to rise; and that of those who are happy enough to arrive a large portion are received into the hospitals.

Near Odessa several detachments of Russian infantry and cavalry have perished from cold.

China.—The rebels have captured a large part of the Imperial squadron, and there was a panic at Canton.

Holloway's Pills.—A Certain Cure for General Debility.—Charles Denton, a commission agent, of the "Hotel d'Europe," Hamburg, has informed Professor Holloway, that he suffered considerably whenever he went on his expeditions; his tongue became dry, his throat parched, accompanied with great general debility, he tried a variety of Medicines but his health continued to decline. As he had heard Holloway's Pills spoken of very highly, he determined to give them a trial; the virtue of these medicines in his case noted like magic, in three weeks he was completely invigorated, and a perfect cure of the system effected; and he declares he will never be again without them.
