

on the part of Russia by M. D'Oubril, and we have no accounts yet of his having left Vienna to proceed to Paris. Besides, we do not believe that the Emperor would enter into a separate negotiation with France.

Dutch Papers to the 21st arrived last night—The new King and Queen of Holland arrived at their Palace, the House in the Wood, on Wednesday evening. They passed under illuminated triumphal arches, and the road through the wood was lighted by torches. They were escorted by French troops. The Dutch papers give a dry, cold account of the procession. Nothing is said of any public rejoicings; nothing of any acclamations of the multitude all pressing round their new Sovereigns and impeding their passage by their rude but affectionate zeal. Not a huzza seems to have disturbed the mournful silence with which they stole by night into the Palace of the Nassaus. The arches were erected by French Troops, and the King and Queen, instead of being conveyed by their new subjects to their residence, were escorted by the soldiers of the Tyrant who has elevated them to the royal dignity. The procession had the air and appearance of a funeral—the funeral of Dutch freedom!

Bonaparte has taken possession of the little Republic of Ragusa; alledging, as his reason that the enemies of France exercised too much influence in the Republic—But he will evacuate it when the Russians shall have evacuated not only Dalmatia, but Corfu and all the Seven Islands, and have retired from the Adriatic.

The fever of pacific speculation appears to have, in some degree, subsided, if we may judge from the gradual declension of the funds yesterday afternoon. Omnium, which was in the morning so high as 6½, fell, before the close of the market to 5. The causes assigned for this depression were very numerous. Some attributed it to the language of the last French Journals, which while they abound in assurances that there is now little danger of the tranquillity of the Continent being disturbed, do not hold out the slightest probability of peace with England; while others went so far as to state, that Russia had actually entered into a negotiation with France for a separate peace; in consequence of which England would once more be left to fight "single handed" with the enemy. The latter statement, which agrees, in some respects, with our former intelligence, we consider by no means improbable; but so far from viewing it as a circumstance discouraging to Great Britain, such is the high confidence we have in our ability to maintain with credit the single handed contest, that we trust none, except the class of disappointed speculators, will be found to regret the event. Nothing has yet publicly transpired with respect to the dispatches brought by Mr. Wilbraham from M. Talleyrand to Mr. Fox on Saturday; but the general belief is, that they related to the proposed exchange of prisoners, though there are many who continue to cling to the hope of a pacific negotiation being already entered into between the two Governments. The Foreign papers are as uninteresting as usual, and contain not a single article that calls for particular observation. The reports relative to the terms of peace proposed by France, which were circulated yesterday, are totally unfounded.

Friday night, about twelve o'clock, Mr. Proudman, the Messenger, set off with dispatches from Mr. Fox, to Petersburg. Mr. Dressing is not gone to Vienna as reported.

JUNE 25.

The Earl of Yarmouth is understood to have reached Paris on Thursday, and the fall of the funds upon his arrival is rumoured to have been occasioned by the unfavourable nature of the Dispatches of which he was the bearer. Mr. Wilbraham left London for Paris on Monday. The Funds have not recovered the fall they experienced on Monday.

Mr. Fox is extremely indisposed at his house in the Stable Yard.

The Squadron detached by Sir HOME POPHAM on an expedition against Buenos Ayres consists of the Diadem 64; Diomedé 50; Narcissus and Leda frigates. The troops employed are the 71st and 72d regiments under General BEREAFORD.

JUNE 26.

It is believed that some requisition has been made to Prussia on the part of France to evacuate Hanover. Bonaparte has declared that Hanover was not to be considered as the equivalent for the surrender of Anspach. It is said, that he has proposed to indemnify Prussia for the cession of Anspach by giving her a district in the Northern part of Franconia. In order to enlarge and strengthen the power of Holland, and to reconcile the Dutch to the New Government by the prospect of a great extension of Commerce, Bonaparte is said to have it in contemplation to add Hanover to the kingdom of Holland, and to give it besides, the command of the mouths of the Ems, the Weser, and the Elbe. It has been industriously circulated in Holland, that Bonaparte has great designs and intentions with respect to the new Kingdom, and that he will make every effort to restore the Dutch to their ancient commercial opulence and naval power. But Prussia, after having violated every principle of good faith to this Country, in occupying Hanover, will not, it is supposed, easily relinquish it; and we shall not at all be surprised to find a requisition on the part of France to evacuate it, give rise to a war between Prussia and France, in which the former will solicit support from the very Powers with which she is now at war.

Parliament is expected to be prorogued about the 27th of the next month.—A Dissolution, for which the Ministers are rumoured to be actively preparing, is expected to take place in September.

Among the reports of Yesterday it was stated, that the Duke of Brunswick was on his way to this Country.

Tuesday a very numerous and respectable company assembled at Willis's Great Room in King's-street, to celebrate the Birth-day and Acquittal of Lord Melville. Amidst a number of loyal and favourite toasts the memory of the late Rt. Hon. William Pitt was received with reiterated plaudits; after which, Mr. Dignum, in the most enchanting style, sung the Pilot that weathered the Storm. The company broke up at a late hour, after spending an evening replete with harmony and festivity. The Duke of Cambridge's band played the whole evening.

A Grand Fete was given on Monday at Greenwich by the Hon. Captain Kennedy, at which Lord Melville's health was drunk with great enthusiasm; the parties went in several elegant barges attended by a superb Band of Music. The company landed at the Ship Tavern, where they were most sumptuously entertained.

His Majesty's ships Isis and Jamaica, with the fleet under convoy from Portsmouth, bound to Newfoundland, Quebec, &c. passed by this port this day.

THE TELEGRAPH.

FREDERICTON, AUGUST 30, 1806.

The Editor of the Telegraph is enabled to assure his readers, that as he has received additional help, this paper will be published regularly every Saturday morning, for the future.

Wednesday—arrived at the Post-Office in this place, the English Mail for the month of July. A friend has put us in possession of some London papers, received by the Mail—but they furnish nothing in addition to those already in hand.

Arrived—the Sloop Maria, Capt. Pine, from St. John.— This will afford more speculation for the enlightened talents and "scrutinizing glance" of the Editor of the St. John "impartial" Gazette.

TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS.

"Clodpole" is received, and the Author is welcome to have his valuable communication back again, if he wishes it. Had he mingled with his composition a degree of common capacity, we might then been induced to have given place to it; but as it was our sole intention at the commencement, so it shall be our study to preserve it, not to insert those things that may tend to injure the feelings of any individual, or excite the indignation of a respectable community.
