

When you get to the steps you will see a fellow with a white vest yelling "Freshmen take the back door." That's Darb Coy. Beware of him; he's engaged. Then you'll see another fellow with chest expanded and a genial condescending air, and you'll think it's the Chancellor, but it isn't, it's Charles M. Hoar, '09. Maybe you'll hear someone in the hall; that will be Alder Gerow or Stan Bridges. Keep right on up stairs to the Ladies' Reading Room, and we'll give you the heartiest welcome you have ever received since the second time you ran away from home. After you have worn your gown inside out for a while, you will be considered, as you certainly will be, one of the most accomplished and attractive coeds that ever climbed the rocky way to knowledge.

Hoping to hear your voice around the halls in the fall, I remain,

Your old friend,
Mary, '08

P. S. Dysart, Carr and Sherman are going, so we'll have a dandy time next year.

The Boarding Houses

At Morrells the preachers are
As good as they can be,
Pointing people to a place
That they will never see.

The crooks of Parson's Poker House,—
They're known everywhere;
The rage of three non-co-eds
And one fair Sophomore.

Tan many Imps or Tammany Angels,
Just which we do not know.
A many sided part they play.
They know where the rubbers go.

At Atkinson's they have a 'phone,
They work it every day,
With the Co-eds down at Harper's,—
Oh My! What don't they say?

There's Cooper's, what a noisy crowd!
They do nothing to regret,
And steer clear of the Nashwaaksis,
Where once they did upset.

And Colwell's Freshies, quiet crowd(?)
Who stay and plug all day(?)
One never sees them on the street(?)
Not even now in May(?)

The writer never has found out
Just where the Co-eds stay—
He never had occasion to;
He is not "Happy" Day.

Bridges was heard on Queen Street
on Saturday night.
