R. L. SIMMS, Editor-in-Chief.

MISS A. L. GLASS, Associate Editor.

Changes in Editorial Staff

THE Ladies' Society, founders and controllers of WANAGAN, wish to announce that Mr A. L. M. Dysart, K. B., has been removed from the editorial staff of this paper for swearing—not so much because he swears as because he refuses to alter the form of his oath to “lovely goddesses.”

After a sharp contest, at the earnest solicitation of Miss Glass, Mr R. L. Simms was elected to the vacant editorship, Miss L. L. Smith withdrawing the name of the other nominee, Mr. J. W. Estey.

Salutatory

In making his bow to the readers of WANAGAN, the Editor desires to express his appreciation of the honor done him and to assure them that he will take up this work as he has done other things (e. g. making political speeches, coaching private pupils in Latin, rushing young ladies,) with all his heart. He also firmly resolves to be a model to College men generally in all things, including the matter of getting home at an early hour—3 a. m. (Firth and Macaulay take notice.)

“Comfy Dear?”

A member of WANAGAN staff, resting on a three-legged chair in the Ladies' Reading Boom, noted the following conversation between a Soph. and a Freshette:—

Soph—“Do you know Hannah? He's a lovely boy! So considerate of the ladies; so fond of their society! His real name is Willie; they call him Hannah after a distinguished relative of his.”

Freshette—“Was that him that we saw at the toboggan slide, so careful about the lady's comfort.”

Soph.—“Yes! And how lovingly he looked at her; how carefully he fixed her on the toboggan; how exquisitely sweet was his tone as he asked, ‘Comfy dear?’” and the Soph. sighed and wished all College boys were equally nice to the girls.

But the wicked Freshette, mimicking said, “‘Comfy dear?’ I guess she was comfy dear’ by the look of her.”

Pippin, hearing of Simms' election as WANAGAN Editor—“Rats Beelzebub! I wanted that job.”
