A Politician's Advice.

Young man, if you would be renowned,
And by your fellow-mortals crowned,
And flattered be by nearly all
'Mongst whom your footsteps chance to fall,
Lie a little.

If you would be accounted great.
And competent to rule the state;
If high positions you would hold
Which might to you bring wealth untold
Lie a little.

You must not think an honest man
A chance 'mongst demagogues can stand;
No room has politics for such;
Of goodness now it has too much—
Lie a little.

You must, of course attend the church
Lest "infidel" your name besmirch;
And if the membership you'd bribe
You must quite liberally subscribe—
And lie a little.

Be ready e'er, when people ask,
To take for them the hardest task;
If you dont keep your promise true,
Just promise more and that will do—
Lie a little.

When asked to give a temperance speech,
You must denounce the whiskey leech,
But when the voting day comes round
Upon the liquor side be found—
Lie a little.

For many temperance men, my friend,
Of keenest powers have discerned
That the cry which put them into power
Was not of use another hour.—
Lie a little.

In moments of weakness they declared
If e'er by Fortune they were spared
To get to Parliament, straightway.
They'd banish wine without delay,
Nor keep a little.

But when they get to Parliament
Of their rash vows they did repent;
For to their sight loomed up from far
For each a boodle laden star,
If they would lie a little.

What if they did? And can we blame
If many through the furnace came
Besmirched and anything but pure,
When only was their office sure
By lying just a little?

So now if politics, my friend,
To enter forthwith you intend,
This counsel take and don't despise,
But keep it ever before your eyes—
Lie a little.

Henry Harvey Stuart, Teacher.
Benton, N. B., Sept. 14 1895.

Under an ancient elm she stood
A fairy form in grey—
Her eyes were bright as the stars at night
And she merrily trilled a lay.
I stood in the shadow and watched her face
It was eerie and passing fair,
As a ditty she sang so merrily rang
On the waves of the evening air.
I was stirred to the depths of my very soul
Ne'er heard I a voice like that.
I threw all I owned at her very feet
For she was my neighbor's cat.—Ex.

My thanks are due the Supreme Lodge, Order of Unity, for the prompt manner in which I received payment of my claim for sick benefits amounting to $11.25. I shall do all I can in the future for the cause of Unity. Yours Fraternaly.

Frank White.

The press of the order can exercise an influence for good in agitating the question of keeping hats on at funerals. While it is a time honored custom to remove hats, yet it is dangerous one, and lodges should take up the question and resolve to discontinue it. There have been many cases of illness resulting from exposure at funerals, and for the benefit of humanity it should be stopped.—The Western Odd Fellow.
