

and although it was growing dark they stuck to it. At last the Flyweight Champion came upon the supposed tracks of a moose. It was getting darker now, but they determined to bring down this moose at any cost, so they continued to follow the trail.

"Look, Brock," said Torchy, "there's a cow moose right off there."

Instantly the party became very silent and moved forward a few paces. At a word from the Sky Pilot, the four fired, and ran forward. The moose stopped dead in her tracks, and fell down, mortally wounded. In a few minutes the party came upon the body of the dead animal, but to their amazement Tommy announced the eluding quarry to be a cow.

At this moment the game warden appeared on the scene of action, and seeing the dead body of the cow, realized the situation at once. He told the astonished group that this cow was his property, and therefore fined the adventurous huntsmen a sum of money which exceeded the capital on hand, and so they had to give the names and addresses of their fathers to the despot.

The party returned to the camp, broken-hearted at this sad catastrophe. It proved to be the crisis of the hunting trip, and after having supper in the woods they returned to the hotel, and boarding their car, journeyed home, somewhat crestfallen and ashamed.

—Max Aiken, '25?

Paradise

A shaded room,
An open fire,
A cozy nook,
And your heart's desire.

PARADISE LOST

The self-same room,
The lights just few,
The same little nook,
With Ma there too.

INFERNO

The room, the nook,
The girl, the fire,
Everything bliss—
And enter Sire!