

F. H. S. Girl—"Well, what's the good of a place to practice. We haven't a coach, and only two or three girls go down to play, at least they did last year. Anyway it's too much trouble."

F. H. S. Boy—"Oh well, if that's the way you feel about it, no wonder you haven't a basketball team, 'where there's a will, there's a way,' you know."

I'm sure all the High School students don't feel the way this one girl did about basketball. Many of us want a team, but no one seems willing to take the lead.

Why not have a class meeting, elect a manager and—go to it?

If we asked for a place to practice, it is very likely we would get it. The armories is not in use every afternoon. As for a coach, that would come later, get your gymnasium first, and then turn out, not two or three of our loyal girls, but eleven or twelve each afternoon there is practice. If we have a decent turn out, it is very likely Mr. Miller or Mr. Cass, who coached us last year, would help us out this year.

Now girls, don't let this matter drop. Remember—"Where there's a will, there's a way."

In spite of the two banquets and one tea to which the boys had already been served by the girls they were anxious for another to close the football year. The boys provided the food while the girls arranged for the Domestic Science room in which to hold the banquet and also served. The football team, manager and coach were present, and other guests included Mr. Rouse, Mr. Titus and Mr. Miller. After the repast a number of the boys assisted the girls in washing the dishes and cleaning up. It had been arranged a few days previous that the girls were to enjoy the evening at the movies at the boys' expense, the partners having been decided by drawing lots—perhaps a dangerous procedure in the days when "all is fair in love and war." It might be mentioned that some of our young men (?) might take lessons in keeping promises. However, about a dozen couples eventually arrived at the Gaiety.

BOYS, ATTENTION!

Now boys, it is your time to "Arise and Shine." Why not get busy and organize a few sleigh drives, skating, snowshoeing or tobogganing parties for the winter? Surely you do not expect the girls to do it all. While we admit that you were "wonderful" boys to win the Football Championship, still you might show your appreciation of our support by following the above suggestion. How about it?

Yesterday as I was walking along a slippery street a very pretty girl in front of me slipped and fell. I ran to help her up, but just then I remembered that father told me never "to pick up a girl," so I "let 'er lie."
