

13. Selection by the High School Orchestra—Sullivan's Operatic Gems.

14. Valedictory—Mr. James A. Trites.

15. God Save the King.

Later the class prophecies were delivered. The class prophets were Miss Dorothy Coates for the girls, Hazen Horncastle for the Commercial Course. Fred Hewett and Ralph Munroe for the rest of the class. The reading of the prophecies was followed by a most enjoyable dance which did not end until an early hour in the morning.

Address to the Class of '26

Dr. C. C. Jones, Chancellor of the University of New Brunswick, delivered the address to the Graduating Class. He expressed his pleasure in being given the opportunity to address the first class graduated in the new hall and also the largest class ever sent out by the school. He felt he must express the belief that the class had quality as well as quantity. He also must congratulate the class upon selecting a High School course. The value of such education was demonstrated on a basis of dollars and cents. By statistics it had been found that a person without a High School education earned $500 annually as an average throughout his lifetime and a person with a High School education earned $1000 annually. The difference was sufficiently marked to prove the value of education. He trusted that some of the class at least would increase their earning power still further by selecting still higher education.

The schools trained people for the highest class of citizenship. Canada was in need of leadership and it was to the product of the schools that the country must come for leaders.

He would mention some of the qualities of citizenship which appealed to him more strongly. Foremost was honesty. That was not the honesty mentioned in the adage—Honesty is the Best Policy. Honesty which was adopted merely as a policy was not honesty. It was hypocrisy. There must be a proper conception of honesty. It must become a habit of life.

Service was another quality. They should go out imbued with the idea of service.

Another great quality was reverence. It was a quality not as noticeable as it once was. If one liked it could be called religion.
