We are not going to make comparisons, but in a general way to demonstrate our claim to the title of The Other Store we want to remind you of the stock of all stores.

Take for instance the largest stock of Dress Goods in the city. Go in to buy a dress—how much of the stock do you see? Perhaps you do not know exactly what you want, and have yet to make up your mind as to color.

Don't you find that the largest stock dwindles down to a few pieces on the counter out of which to make the selection? Why doesn't the clerk show you that lot on the top shelf—their last season's? Clerks do not like to show goods that are a year old. What about the lot in paper?—Fall goods—no use.

There was a gentleman in the store yesterday, one who is in a position to be posted, and is posted—he said: That is the best stock of dress goods in St. John. We considered that a pretty strong statement until we thought out the above, then it did not seem nearly so strong, and we think more of that gentleman's judgment than ever we did, of course.
