PROGRESS, SATURDAY AUGUST 31

GOOD THING TO HAVE!

Mr. and Mrs. J. DeWolf Spurr, of St. John, are in town, the guests of Mrs. Spurr's sister, Mrs. C. B.

Mrs. George McSweeney is paying a short visit to

Charlottetown, P. E. I. Mr. and Mrs. M. McDade, of Fredericton, are in town. Mr. McDade is here to work up a boom edition of PROGRESS. I notice in your last issue a letter from a Yarmouth gentleman speaking of the warm appreciation in which Progress is held in that town, but I do not think it can meet with a much warmer reception anywhere than in Moncton. Indeed it seems impossible to keep the supply quite up to the demand, and anyone who wants Progress must emulate the much praised early worm; for those who are trusting enough to fancy there will be a few copies left over on Monday have to borrow from their friends, or they wont get it. I often hear people say they wish Progress came out twice a week, it is so long to wait from Saturday to Saturday; and I also often meet children of eight and nine years old reading Progress on their way home from the post office or bookstore.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Steeves reached home last Friday from their European trip. They visited the Paris exposition and many other points of interest. Miss Hinson, sister of Rev. W. B. Hinson, of Moncton, came over in the same steamer, the Ulunda. CECIL GWYNNE.

Mrs. Joshua Chandler gave another party last Wednesday evening, in honor of Mr. Forsayeth, of Toronto, who has been visiting her. Not very many guests were present, but those that were had no difficulty in passing a very pleasant evening, judging from what I hear. The presence of several young people from other places added a certain amount of the "spice of life," and the threatening weather of all day changing to a most perfect evening, was all that was wanted to insure enjoyment. The party broke up about 1.30 o'clock. This is the third dance that Mrs. Chandler has given us this summer, besides two picnics and two excursions on the Arbutus, and I am afraid that without her Dorchester society would rather languish. Would that more would follow her worthy example in this has again left us, eager to get back to the work and Mrs. Augustus Chapman, of Amherst, is visiting Mrs. David Chapman, here, together with her mother, Mrs. Boggs.

Miss Cooke and Mr. Will Cooke, of Moncton, returned to Moncton on Friday, from a week's visit to Mrs. J. B. Foster, at the penitentiary.

On Thursday evening, Mr. and Mrs. M. Barlow Palmer gave a very pleasant dance at their residence in honor of Mrs. Weith and Mrs. Gidney, who are visiting them. The large rooms were just comfortably filled with guests, but not enough to make dancing difficult, and dancing was kept up with evident enjoyment until after 2 o'clock, with interruptions for ice creams and a delicious supper. As at Mrs. Chandler's dance the previous evening, a number of strangers were present, and their attendance made the evening still more enjoyable. The weather, good floors, good music and attentive host and hostess, combined to make the party one of the nicest that has been given in Dorchester this year,

Mr. J. F. Teed arrived home again on Thursday last, from his railway building operations in Cape Breton, and spent a few days at his home here before disappearing once more for two or three

Mr. John A. Gray, accountant at the penitentiary, is away on a well-earned holiday. He left on Wednesday for St. John, as his first objective point.

On Friday last, the men of Dorchester went off on what is now an annual event-a "stag picnic." A drive of a few miles down the bay brought them to the picnic grounds, and once there, the reader is left to imagine what delightful times they had. Wives, mothers, mothers-in-law, sisters, aunts and great aunts all at home, plenty to eat and a genteel sufficiency pour boire. What more could be asked? They arrived home some time during the evening, tired, but happy-oh! yes, very happy!

Mr. J. Douglas Hazen, barrister, of St. John, spent Friday in Dorchester, the guest of Mr. Hanington. Mrs. M. G. Teed spent Friday last in Moncton, returning to Dorchester the same evening.

Messrs. J. W. Y. Smith and Percy Chandler, assisted by Lady Smith and Mrs. Joshua Chandler, gave a picnic on Monday, which was attended by quite a large number of guests, if that is the proper word. A long array of barouches, dog-carts and buggies, filled with the picnic-goers, started at 1 o'clock from Mrs. Chandler's house on Church street, their destination being the old grindstone factory at Cape Meainguin on Cumberland Basin, 15 miles distant. The weather was magnificent, and the scenery along the shore is in many places beautiful, so the drive there and back, though long, was very far from being tiresome. Arrived at the picnic grounds (which bear the unmistakable signs of many similar visitations) some of the picnickers strolled about admiring the scenery, which right there is better than anywhere else, while others busied themselves in making a fire, broiling shad fresh from the nets, and otherwise preparing for tea, which when ready filled a long felt want with most of the party. The start for home was made about 7 o'clock, and two hours later the hindmost straggler was home again, delighted with the trip. Mrs. Vavasour, of Fredericton, is in Dorchester, visiting her sister, Mrs. George M. Fairweather. Mrs. Gidney, of Boston, is making a visit to Dorchester, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Palmer.

A large number of people started off yesterday afternoon to take part in an excursion on the Arbutus, given by Mrs. Joshua Chandler. The party were to sail down the bay to Grindstone Island, take a picnic tea there, and return to Dorchester in the evening, but | day. unforseen circumstances prevented. When the party had all been safely embarked at the pier, it was discovered that the tide had gone out so far as to leave the steamer aground with no chance of floating again until after the tide had turned. This announcement threw rather a shade over the spirits of many, but it soon melted away under the cheering influence of Mrs. Chandler and others, who went ashore again, found a nice shady place, and organized pressed that it was the last concert. Mr. J. R. Campbell, of St. John, who has been a land picnic on the spot. The rest of the afternoon spending a ten days' vacation with his parents here, was spent there very cosily. Long before tea was bustle of city life. He left for St. John on Thursday. Grindstone Island and had almost forgotten the mishap to the boat. After tea the captain announced that the boat would soon be afloat again, and, on the principle of better late than never, the greater part of the picnicers decided on a sail about the harbor.

When the Arbutus floated they re-embarked, while those who were already tired returned home. The remainder sailed about until nearly half past ten and then landed once more, disgusted with both lemons and brandy as preventatives of seasickness.
