I AM CONTENTED.

The soldier said as he was called to die "I am contented; But tell my mother in the village, My sweetheart in the cottage, To pray for me with folded hands."

The soldier's dead; his mother and his sweetheart, They pray for him with folded hands. They dug his grave upon the battlefield, And all the earth was red Wherein they laid him. The sun beheld him thus, and said : "I am contented."

And flowers clustered on his grave And were contented there to bloom. And when the wind would roar Then asked the soldier from his deep, dark grave : "Was it the flag that fluttered ?"

"Nay!" said the wind : "my gallant hero, Nay; thou hast died in battle, but the flag Hath won the day. Thy comrades Have carried it away full happily." Then said the soldier from his deep, dark grave: "I am contented."

And then he hearkened to the wandering Of herds and shepherds, and he asked: "Is that the din of battle?" "Nay!" they said; "nay, my gallant hero; For thou art dead; the war is over; Thy fatherland is free and happy." Then said the soldier from his deep, dark grave: "I am contented."

And then he hearkened to the lovers' laughter; And thus the soldier asked: "Are these the people's voices, who remember me? "Nay!" spake the lovers; "nay, my gallant hero, For we are they who never do remember; For spring hath come, and all the earth is smiling; We must forget the dead."

Then said the soldier from his deep, dark grave: -Carmen Sylva in the Independent.

CHIDESTER BROTHERS.

The first time I ever heard of the Chidester Brothers, Mollie Hayes spoke of them as they can be.

week. They are at Tomlinson's, and they drive a beautiful pair of blacks in a light "But who are they? I declare, Mollie, Mollie laughed. She has the sweetest Brothers. temper—and did stop a moment.

"They are"-she said slowly -"oh, I ing away. don't know who they are, except just the Chidester Brothers; nor what they are, except-dentists." "Dentists!" I exclaimed.

"Yes, dentists. They are travelling from place to place in their own carriage and practicing as they go. They enjoy travelling, and like to study the country and the people, you know. They have two offices at Tomlinson's, but they drive out and pale, and oh! how ugly, mean and into the country and call, and they will go to any one who sends for them. It is very convenient, now isn't it?"

"No, I don't like strangers, anyway; but when it comes to strangers, you don't so handsome, and really quite like gentle-men," mildly remonstrated Susie Brown, five minutes."

who was calling. "Like! But I want the men I know to be gentlemen, and I don't think a gentleman would think of peddling either teeth or toothbrushes. One is of no higher grade of business than is the other."

"I think you are right," observed Mr. Heming, Susie's escort, and the very quiet assistant of Mr. Brown, our druggist.

Mr. Heming had been a stranger a year before this, but he had come to Meadowside well recommended. Besides, he was so very plain, it would never have paid him to be anything but "eminently respectable." Of course I am right!" I cried. "Why, these men may be part of a gang of burglars, instead of gentlemen or men of honest and honorable calling." "I should think you would feel timid as it is," remarked Susie, with a glance round the room. We were eating fruit in the dining-room, where the sideboard and buffet were crowded with silver and pretty

"Where do you keep all these?" asked Mr. Heming. "You surely do not leave them exposed in this way during the

"Oh, no, indeed. They are all carried up into mother's room. Mine is next to it. It is a terrible nuisance, and if they were mine I should just leave them here. The house is safe enough. The boys are in the nursery and the servants in the attic. But I like to be alone. Dear me, I don't think I could stand it without a few hours to my-self. Listen! That's the way it is from morning until night. Just excuse me while I settle them."

I ran upstairs, and when I came down Susie and Mr. Heming were ready to take leave and waiting under the hall lamp.
"I believe this will be a match," I thought, as I kissed Susie .. "And really," carrying on the same thought as I went slowly upstairs again, "I don't see why it would not be a good thing. Susie is cerlooked it. And I am "rising" with him. tainly a quiet, pretty little thing! And he is not half such a fright as I thought him. There was quite a glow in his eyes to-night. Usually he is as dull as ditch-water. Not much like those everlasting Chidester Brothers." .

Two weeks later a party of the young people came out to spend the last evening of my loneliness with me. Father and mother were coming home the next day, and I was heartily glad of it. Jim was in Boston, finishing his trip with some college friends. Among my guests of the evening were Susie Brown and Mr. Heming, Mollie Hayes and one of the Chidester brothers!

They all stayed late. Mr. Heming and Susie were the first to leave, and Mollie and the Chidester the last. After they had crossed the doorstep I saw him pause and glance back at the hall and the stairway. It was a peculiar and searching glance, and gave me a chilly sensation of fear and

Under the effect of that last glance, how-ever, I had all the silver gathered up most carefully, and packed in several baskets, and I concluded to sleep in mother's room instead of my own, Moreover, I opened the doors between the nursery and our rooms. I was not at all mindful of the delights of utter loneliness. I went back and forth several times to the tumbled beds in the nursery, envying the rosy sleepers, and it was late, indeed, before I joined them.

Almost instantly, it seemed to me, I was broad awake again, and looking straight before me at the terrible, terrible sight.

There was a light in the room—a pale, uncertain, flickering light which streamed upward from the floor at the foot of the bed, and cast strange shadows on the ceil-

"Burglars!" beat my frightened heart.
"The Chidester Brothers!" came choking into my tightened throat.

I had too much sense to move or scream. I lay still as death, only drawing long, even breaths as if sound in sleep, and using my eyes for all they were worth. The shadows on the ceiling showed that things were being taken up and put down—our silver!—
by gigantic hands, but all other outlines were so contused, I could distinguish nothing. Suddenly I heard a sound—a sound which filled me with sickening dread. The boys were awake-were moving-were calling

The burglar sprang to his feet, light and noiseless as a breath, and stood poised and ready, his back toward me. There came the quick patter of little feet. He turned his lamp flared up. In the glass opposite, above the mask which had doubtless slipped as he sprang up, I saw the face of the "eminently respectable" Mr. Heming!
Involuntarily, I uttered a sharp cry.

Then, I closed my eyes and felt myself sinking away into helpless, hopeless terror. But the door into my room flew open with a bang, I heard Jack shout and Nutty scream; a rustle, a thud, a pistol shot, confused voices, trampling of feet, and tre-mendous pounding and kicking on the

I sprang out of bed, and the chaos began to resolve itself into some kind of order. Jack and Nutty were both telling me that there was a carriage at the door; the bur-"Have you seen the Chidester Brothers?" glar was gone through the window and evishe asked, never giving me a chance to answer. "Oh, Jennie, they are too splendid for couthing. They are too splendid for couthing. They are too splendid for couthing. did for anything. They are as handsome Jim-our brother Jim-roaring for the hall s they can be."

"Who are they?" I asked.

"Oh, they have been in town about a Jack, as soon as I had hurried into my wrapper, and trembling in every limb, we rushed down the long hall and stairs. The hall lamp was burning, as usual. I hastily unbolted, unbarred and unlocked the great you never stop talking long enough to say front door, opened it with a jerk, and threw myself into the arms of-the Chidester

"Jennie! Thank God!" cried Jim, snatching me to him as he rushed in. Are you all safe? No one hurt at all?"

There were others trooping in and standing round me with startled and admiring faces. A dark and compact group wore uniforms and carried themselves with the easy manner of men to whom nothing was common, I saw Mr. Heming.

"Jennie, you are shaking with a chill!" cried Jim. "You must go to bed at once.
I'll take you up"—for I tightened my hold on him—"and call the servants for you. I expect they are too frightened to come out "But, Jennie, they are so pleasant and of their rooms. Just make yourself com-

"First rate fellows--my class, you know.

They telegraphed me," "We've made a big haul. That rascal is the master spirit of the gang which has been at work round here for a year or two. He's an old hand at it, and his engagement with Mr. Brown was one of his clever dodges. He is a druggist, as he is half a dozen other things, but his letters were forged. The Chidesters saw him once in Boston when he was on trial, and they knew him at once when they saw him here. They are wide-awake, both of them. About a week ago they heard something-I haven't got at the bottom of it yet, but two men something to do with it—which put them on theitrack of tonight, and they wrote to who came to Tomlinson's for the night had me, but they had to make it a cautious letter, and asked me to hold myself in readiness for a telegram, but not to come without one. I was at their cousins'. They telegraphed last night, and met me at the train at the next station. Syd says he was here last evening, for he was half afraid I might not get home, and he thought he had better look round a bit in case anything should come off to frighten you."

They laid a wager that they could leave

Boston in their own carriage, and drive for six months east, west, north and south, just as they chose, taking no money with them and sending for none, but living honestly by their wits.

And when the Chedisters came back—as they had to, to the trial of my burglar-Well, I might as well tell it in a word-I belong to one of them. Cyril Chidester found respect a very good foundation for a warmer feeling. So he asked me to over-look his folly and sink the remembrance of Frank Leslie's.
