To indicate the character and importance of the work done by the Society of Canadian Literature, at Montreal, we give the list of subjects treated since its organization: "The Development of Canadian Literature," by John Reade, F. R. S. C.; "Haliburton" (Sam Slick), by Mr. J. F. Torrance ; "Frechette," Mr. L. R. Gregor : with her. "Heavysege," Mr. G. H. Flint; "Cremazie," Mr. W. McLennan; "Kirby," Mr. W. D. Lighthall; "Literary Life in Canada," Prof. C. G. D. Roberts ; "The Literary Movement in Canada." Miss B. L. Macdonell; "LeMay," Mr. L. R. Gregor; "Miss J. V. Crawtord," Mr. John Popham ; "Garneau," Mr. Cruchet Sir William E. Logan," Mr. H. T. Martin. The latest was a reading, by Mr. Geo. Murray, of an excellent paper, en-titled "Legends and Lyries." Others promised during the present season are from Mr. Robert Harris, F. R. S. C.; Mr. D. W. Lighthall, Mr. John Popham and Mr. Henry Mott.

Striking thoughts, fine reflections and beautiful images wed themselves to music in the verse of "Seranus" (Mrs. Frances Harrison); and the late publication. by Hart & Co., Toronto, of her Pine Rose and Fleur de Lys is a notable literary event. Her style combines strength and refinement with much of freshness and originality; and her spirit and depiction are genuinely Canadian. The Week says of her: "We have here not merely a hope the New Year will bring him back to us singer, but a seer, one who can carry us again. away down the great river, 'from flat Ontario' on through the rushing waters, until we are weary of water, 'tired or the tumult and tormoil of water around us,' that Miss Murray was so unfortunate as to lose her

So do we live among all the objects that the poetess sets before us that we almost forget the music which was delighting our ears, and become absorbed in the moving panorama which is created and kept in life by the realistic power of the writer. And yet, again, it is no mere realism that we have here to do it. It is no prosaic photography, which gives us a dead world as representative of the living one: it is life and love and poetry, it is the vision of human life as it is seen by clear eyes, guided not only by a well-disciplined judgment and an artistic taste, but by a sympathetic heart." As a choice speci-men, we cite the following lyric, which appeals to us not only by its music, but its patriotism :

VICTORIA REGINA. All through London's mighty maze Rolled the tide of jubilee; From her dark and sordid ways Came the children out to see England's Queen of fitty years; Beat the heart and fell the tears, As with martial fire and blaze, Pomp and pageantry and praise Rolled the tide of jubilee.

All along the mighty maze Rolled the Pageant of our Queen; There was not in ancient days Fairer Pageant ever seen. Withered, hangs the Tudor Rose, All the glimmering past but shows Faded in the glorious blaze Of these late Victorian days-Roll the Pageant of our Queen.

It is a very handsome book, and its price is $1.25.

Nye's Pen-Picture of Riley.

Many who know Riley by his work have a very erroneous idea of his personality. With the power to reach and touch all hearts with his pathos, he is a thorough boy with those he knows and knows well. Many people believe themselves to be quite intimate with him who really know nothing of him at all, for those who are most free to approach him and lean upon him and confide in him by the day, are apt to go away with a wrong impression sometimes. Nothing freezes him up sooner than the fresh and gurgling human pest who yearns to say he is intimate with some one who is well known, the curculio which builds its nest in the rind of another's reputation. Such a person would meet a cool and quiet little gentleman who would look out the window during the interview and lock the door alter it had terminated-but a twoyear old child, with its natural sincerity and well-kept hair and nose, would, no doubt, be riding on Riley's back in two minutes and knowing him at his best inside of ten minutes. Like most men who have learned to despise all that is fraudulent and talse, he flies to the unbought love of children, and studies and remembers their candid tailures to be polite, their direct and dangerous comments on eminent freaks, and withal their prophetic power of penetrating motives, and discovering their genuine friends. Riley uses a steel pen, though in the original draft he writes with a lead-pencil on a pad. He gets up and rides on the pencil so earnestly, fearing that the printer will not get the run of his remarks, that he easily makes fitteen or twenty copies of the same MS. He also holds the pad on his lap while writing, and so one may read the net over moire, scarlet poppies; Miss Minnie

DEC. 23 .- Didn't we have a grand time, was the general verdict the following day after the donation party at the rectory. One had only to look at the huge baskets and bundles that came pouring in all the evening, to know how popular the Rev. C. F. Wiggin- and wife are in this district. The family were agreeably taken by surprise, an appropriate speech was made by Mr. W. C. Milner, which was fittingly re-ponded to by the rector. After some instrumental music, Mr. Murray sang one or two of his popular songs, which was a great treat. The guests left their good wi-hes and started for Lome. Among those present were, Mr. J. F. Allison, Mrs. Allison, Mr. and Mrs. II Fawcett, Misses Fawcett, Mrs. Hora e Faweett, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Miner, Mrs. Hora e Faweett, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Miner, Mrs. F. There are faint rumors of a bread and butter club being started. I believe it is to take the place of the musical and literary society organized last year. Now, young people, take Copperfield's advice, put your shoulder to the wheel and don't let it fall through.

Nearly all the outgoing trains for the last week were crowded with young ladies and gentlemen from the academies going home to spend their Christma-holidays. To judge from the bright and smining faces their cup of happiness must be filled to overflowing.
