THE WORLD OF BOOKS.

Notes on Canadian Literature.

In the autumn, of 1886, being at Halifax, I had called to my attention, by a friend in that city, the name and certain poems of Dr. Amos H. Chandler, a worthy citizen of Moncton, N. B., who had, I was assured, excellent rank among our maritime singers. With some of that scepticism which never fails us when we are suddenly called to believe in such an improbability as a genuine poet, of whom we have never heard, I perused the fragment of The Nativity, which was all of it then at my commandand several sonnets that seemed to me of noble spirit. Since that time I have noted with attention whatever from his pen has floated within my little circle of observation, heartily pleased to find that what has won my favor, is cordially endorsed by respectable and eminent authorities. The muse of sacred song seems to have been the prime inspirer of Dr. Chandler, and, especially, has he evidently drunk at the sacred fountain of Milton-imbibing something of the Miltonic spirit, though by no means imitating that poet's style. So, though over shadowed by so much greatness in the choice and treatment of a subject such as The Nativity, he has still a merit and significance altogether his own. Though the poet published this poem sometime since, in an American journal, and issued it again in his volume of Lyrics, Songs and Sonnets, which in 1880 he published, together with writings of the late Charles Pelham Mulvany, he seems not to have been satisfied with it, and has gradually been enlarging and bringing it to a greater perfection. But choicer, to our taste, even, are some of his Songs of Immortality—a series of sonnets, embodying an earnest faith in and aspiration toward, that life, wherein-

Adieus and farewells are a sound unknown; And containing many natural, beautiful touches, and some long scenic glimpses, a few of which we delight to quote:

No more the land the voice of summer fills; And, through the shadows of the dying day, The northern flocks pursue their airy way, And homeward speed beyond the southern hills; No more are heard the sweet melodious trills, Of tender birds that can no longer stay. . .

Dear summer's dying, on her emerald crest, The dark-streak'd stains of swift-returning dust Are mingled with the brown and yellow rust Of those green tresses late. From east to west From north to south, upon her fated breast, The hectic glow is mingled with the must Of dead leaves, dropping. . . .

List to the north-blast sobbing down the dale, Where swallows fletted only yesterday: See clamorous geese, across the stormy bay Now speeding homeward, swift before the gale. Dear summer's dead! but shall revive again; Albeit in the glory of the sun-Her bosom decked with sweetest, fairest flowers, And greenest leaves, begemm'd in purest rain

And her sweet quires returned every one. . . . For a winter picture he gives us what we have seen actualised in perfection during these last years, when in the winter

Lo! every forest tree Bows down its silver branches 'neath the skies-Now flashing, beaming, sparkling with the dyes Of myrids of ice prisms, wherein lies A world of light. . . .

The lamps are all out in the wild wan sky, As Phæbus rises, from a throne of gold, Above the pale and misty folds that lie In one great sea, upon the wood and wold! 'Tis morning! So, the fog-clouds speed away, As ghosts of night, across the steaming bay, By north winds borne: upon the valley's floor The sunlight sparkles: every forest tree Shines iris-hued, in thick frost drapery, From yonder hills down to the wintry shore. List! Sweet as song-birds, squirrels merrily

Chirp in the snow-clad evergreens. As well as earth's fair face, he loves to take in the splendors of night's great banquet-hall,-turning his eyes to behold "the lesser glories of the night," and seeing Serius flashes in the winter sky; While swiftly as the twinkling of an eye, He shines, alternate; now in emerald light, In red, in sapphire; now in purest white; The world is steept in slumber . . . . . . . . Triva, Silver bright Treads her starr'd court of Heaven.

It cannot be denied the poet has sometimes a tendancy to slip out of the empyand to measure us off what, but for the versification, would be recognized as prose; and as an instance of the kind note the tollowing, which we give, without altering the sense, only putting the lines in a prose "Upon the morning of the twentieth day of this month, at the hour of three, Saturn and Mars in close proximity you may behold with fond eyes far away, Northwestward," etc. The ideas are not poetic, nor are they poetically given; but not often will instances of the kind occur; and the fault is one with which some of the finest poets in our language are chargeable. We are glad to learn that the gifted author of Lyrics, Songs and Sonnets meditates a new, improved, and enlarged edition of his writings, to be prefaced by a sonnet to Prof. Charles G. D. Roberts, which Dr. Stewart of the Quebec Chronicle pronounces "a gem, and full of delicacy, illustrations to be supplied by a New Brunswick lady, skillful with the pencil. PASTOR FELIX.

ANOTHER LITERARY PIRATE.

This Time He Purloins the Property of the Sage of Sea Dog Cove.

In the issue of that eminently respectable paper, the New York Mail and Express for Saturday, May 31, appears the following poem:

A CENTURY TO COME. BY DR. GUSTAVUS HAAS. Who'll press for gold the crowded streets, A century to come? Who'll tread our churches with willing feet, A century to come? Pale trembling age and fiery youth, And childhood with his brow of truth; The rich and poor on land, and sea-

Where will the mighty millions be,

A century to come? We all within our graves shall sleep A century to come; No living soul for us will weep A century to come; And other men our lands will till, And others then our streets will fill, And others shout and sing as gay

And bright the sunshine as today

A century to come. The name of the alleged author, being in small capitals, implies that the lines were written for the Mail and Express, and that Dr. Haas has contributed them to that

In the issue of Progress for December 8, 1888, appeared the verses, "A Hundred Years to Come," by Hiram Ladd Spencer, of this city, with an account of their origin. It was stated that they were written by Mr. Spencer, when a boy at school at Brandon, Vt., halt a century ago, and were then published in the Voice of Freedom, of that town. Since then they have gone the rounds of America, uncredited to any one, and are included among the anonymous poems in the Bryant collection.

Since Progress called attention to the authorship, these verses, with the companion poem, "A Hundred Years Ago," and other productions have been published by Mr. Spencer in a neat booklet, he thus asserting his claim to the authorship.

The verses, "A Century to Come," are a garbled reproduction of a part of Mr. Spencer's poem.

If Dr. Haas has palmed off his production on the New York paper, his name would better suit him if spelled Dr. Ass, for he has shamefully mangled Mr. Spencer's lines. The whole of the first stanza has been omitted, and that the public may judge of the bad taste in doing so it is here given:

Where, where will be the birds that sing, A hundred years to come? The flowers that now in beauty spring, A hundred years to come? The rosy cheek The lofty brow,

The heart that beats So gaily now; Where, where will be our hopes and fears, Joy's pleasant smiles and Sorrow's tears, A hundred years to come?

Dr. Haas begins "his poem" with Mr. Spencer's second stanza, and utterly ruins the rythm by saying, Who'll tread our churches with willing feet, instead of following the original of,

Who'll tread you aisles with willing feet, and in the latter part of the last stanza he transposes the lines to disadvantage, instead of saying, as Spencer does, But other men Our homes will fill, Our lands will till, And other birds will sing as gay,

And bright the sun shine as today

A hundred years to come. It is barely possible, however, that Mr. Spencer's poem, as published by him, has been retouched, as is usually the case with the early efforts of poets, and that the lines credited to Dr. Haas are more like the first publication, which the pirate has found in some old newspaper or scrap book and seized upon as his own, under the impression that the author was dead and the poem

An explanation is in order from some-

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla has won its reputation by years of valuable service to the community. It is the best." - R. S. Lang, Druggist, 212 Merrimack st., Lowell, Mass. Dr. W. P. Wright, Paw Paw Ford, Tenn., says. "In my practice, I invariably prescribe Ayer's Sarsaparilla for chronic diseases of the blood." Dr. R. R. Boyle, Third and Oxford sts., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "For two years I have prescribed Ayer's Sarsaparilla in numerous instances, and I find it highly efficacious in the treatment of all disorders of the blood." L. M. Robinson, Pharmacist, Sabina, O., certifies: "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has always been a great seller. My customers think there is no blood-purifier equal to it."

"For many years I was afflicted with scrofulous running sores, which, at last became so bad the doctors advised amputating one of my legs to save my life. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla and soon saw an improvement. After using about two dozen bottles the sores were healed. I continue to take a few bottles of this medicine each year, for my blood, and am no longer troubled with sores. I have tried other reputed blood-purifiers, but none does so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."-D. A. Robinson, Neal, Kansas.
