THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN TIDY AND UNTIDY MEN.

What a Peep Into Each Drawer Revealed-The Tidy Man's Neatness and the Tossed Confusion of the Bureau of His Neighbor

Did you ever see the upper drawer of a man's bureau, girls? Not your brother's. You all know what that looks like; but the average, every-day man's, the man who boards, and has no loving feminine hand to remove his boots from the mantelpiece and his blacking brushes from the clean pillows.

Well, if you did not, perhaps a private view of one, or rather two, for the sake of contrast, might be instructive, as well as amusing. I have two very intimate friends of strikingly opposite dispositions, and if ever two men's lives were mirrored forth in their bureau drawers those are the men.

The first is a neat and precise youth, who has all things around him arranged with military precision. He likes to find everything just where he remembers having put it three months before; consequently, when you open that treasure-house of his most cherished belongings, this is what you

On the extreme right are a pile of carefully arranged letters, which the first glance assures you are placed methodically in the order in which they were received. Beside them lies a little package of stationery, his best stationery, which he only uses for special occasions. In a line with these articles, so as just to fill up the width of the drawer, lie his prayer and hymn books. Awfully precise and lovely it sounds, I know, but yet our hero is human, for near the front of the drawer, well away from the letters and books, lies a pipe, a particular favorite, evidently, as the wellchewed amber tells the practised obside which is evidently nearest the owner's last week. heart you find unmistakeable evidences of still further humanity, for without doubt, our friend has a girl, or had one at some time or other. Here is his handkerchief case, daintly perfumed with sachet powder, and lined with primrose satin on which is Dickson. embroidered the monogram which is supposed to stand for his name. It is, strange to say, used as a receptacle for handkerchiefs, and has a small sachet in each pocket; directly underneath it lies his photo case, well filled, and evidently a present, as it is too elaborate for any man to have bought it himself. If you have sufficient curiosity to lift this same case you will find beneath it two photographs of the said young man's lady love, put neatly and modestly away in a large cream colored envelope in aristocratic loneliness. One represents the favored young woman in evening dress; the other-which our hero infinitely prefers—presents her to the gaze of the world in a decorous walking dress, and the card is rather soiled, whereas the other is quite clean and has not been looked at much. A collar and cuff box of embossed leather, lined with crimson satin, fills up the corner, and the space in the centre is filled with carefully arranged neckties, and a few collars ironed flat, and therefore ineligible for the collar box, and several pairs of gloves, neatly pulled out

Nothing was out of place, and there was plenty of room for twice as much as the drawer contained, all was neat, orderly, and decorous.

But the other drawer, the one that beonged to my other friend, I mean! To attempt a description of it is like trying to bale out the ocean with a sieve. I went into his room the other evening, and found him sitting on the side of his bed, close by an oblong box that looked as if it might be the coffin of all his hopes on earth, for it overflowed with dead and gone

"Anything wrong?" I asked for he was smoking a forlorn eigar, and looking gloomy in the extreme. "Yes," he answered, "A good deal wrong, look at that mess there, and tell me what I am to do with it." The box was his upper drawer, and the "mess" was an apt description of its con-"What have you got in it, old man?" I

"Things," he answered laconically, and he certainly had "Things" in number as the sands of the sea shore.

"I did not mind as long as it would shut," he went on seriously, "but when I found that in a catch-as-catch-can trial of strength between us I came off second best, I thought it was time something was done, and now I don't know how to do it."

It promised to be an interesting study, did that drawer, so under pretence of assisting my unhappy friend, I proceeded to take an inventory of the contents.

I think at a moderate computation there were about twenty-five evening gloves, all soiled, and very few of them mates. I counted nineteen white lawn ties, and fifteen pairs of summer socks. "One would really think you were a quadruped,

There were photograph cases and sachets and cigar cases, silk handkerchiefs by the dozen, and old photographs by the gross; these last were a sort of superstructure with a sort of substratum of shirts, collars, cuffs, and handkerchiefs. There were pipes and matches and match cases. There was an old fashioned housewife stocked with needles-all rustythread and scissors. There was a gutta percha egg for darning socks on, three John next week. percha egg for darning socks on, three skeins of yarn and two plover calls, a pair of seal skin mittens, a large ball of string and two boxes of pens, and over all, and through all, more short and long and through all, more short and long and through all, more short and long and through all. through all, more short and long and medium peices of string than I ever saw in one place before, except in a small boy's pocket.

Vigor in restoring gray hair to its original color, promoting a new growth, preventing the hair from falling, keeping it soft, silky, and abundant, and the scalp cool, healthy, and free from dandruff or humors. The universal testimony is that this preparation has no equal as a dressing, and is, therefore, indispensable to every well-furnished toilet. "I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for some time and it has worked wonders for me. I was troubled with dandruff and was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Vigor my head is perfectly clear of dandruff, the hair has ceased coming out, and I now have a good growth, of the same color as when I was a young woman. I can heartily recommend any one suffering from dandruff or loss of hair to use Ayer's Hair Vigor as a dressing." - Mrs. Lydia O. Moody, East

"Some time ago my wife's hair began to come out quite freely.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

not only prevented my wife from becoming bald, but it also caused an entirely new growth of hair. I am ready to certify to this statement before a justice of the peace."-

H. Hulsebus, Lewisburgh, Iowa. "Some years ago, after a severe attack of brain fever, my hair all came out. I used such preparations for restoring it as my physicians ordered, but failed to produce a growth of hair. I then tried, successively, several articles recommended by druggists, and all alike fell short of accomplishing the desired result. The last remedy I applied was Ayer's Hair Vigor, which brought a growth of hair in a few weeks. I think I used eight bottles in two years; more than was necessary as a restorative, but I liked it as a dressing, and have continued to use it for that purpose. I believe Ayer's Hair Vigor possesses virtues far above those of any similar preparation now on the market." -Vincent Jones, Richmond, Ind.
