POPULAR FALLACIES.

Cases Where Credit Wasn't Given Where

it was Due. Who was it said, "Go west, young man?" Horace Greeley, of course, you will hasten to answer. Wrong again. John L. B. Soule was the real author of the saying, and here is how it came about that Greeley was credited with it. In 1851 Soule was editor of the Terre Haute Express. One day he and Richard Thompson, afterwards Secretary of War, were conversing in the former's sanctum. Thompson had just finished advising Soule to go west and grow up with the country, and was praising his talents as a writer.

"Why, John," he said, "you could write an article that would be attributed to Horace Greeley if you tried."

"No, I couldn't," responded Mr. Soule, modestly. "I'll bet I couldn't." "I'll bet a barrel of flour you can, if you'll promise to try your best, the flour to go to some deserving poor person." "All right; I'll try," responded Soule. He started in by saying Horace Greeley could never have given a young man better advice than that contained in the words,

"Go West, young man." Of course, the advice was not quoted what he might have said. But in a tew weeks the exchanges began coming into the Express office with the epigram accredited to Greeley. So wide a circulation did it obtain that at last the New York Tribune came out with an editorial reprint of the

"The expression of this sentiment has been attributed to the editor of the Tribune erroneously. But so fully does he concur in the advice it give that he indorses most heartily the epigrammatic advice of the Terre Haute Express, and joins in saying, 'Go west, young man, go west.'"

And in the same way, it was not Lincoln who, when informed that Grant drank too much whisky, retorted, "Tell me what brand it is and I'll send a barrel to the other generals." In a burlesque report by Miles O'Reilly (Charles G. Halpine) of an held at Delmonico's in the year 1864, these to guest and employer.—Exchange. words were put into Lincoln's mouth. They ran through the press as Lincoln's ipsissima verba and to this day it is hard to make people father them on the real author. -Illustrated American.

to whom his profession yields a fortune every year. A quarter of a million is a small valuation to place upon his receipts, and he is one of the few men who shine either as a pleader or a counselor. He has accumulated great wealth, which, it is safe to say, no one who knows him begrudges him. His face and form are familiar to all Wall and Broad street men, and his offices Jockey Club. on Wall street are handsomely fitted up and elegant. They are comfortable offices, just as the genial Bob is a comfortable man. Great numbers of stories are told about him. Here is one guaranteed to be new: A stranger went to him one day, and without any reference to the matter of their retainer began: "My father died and made a will," and then went on to tell about his trouble with the will.

"Do you understand the case now?" asked the stranger. "No, sir," responded Mr. Ingersoll, "I "Could a locomotive go as fast on the water as this boat ?"-Life. Mrs. Vanderbilt's New Turnout.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt will be the envy of all the other society women in town during the coming season by reason of her superb carriage horses and her prize coachman. She first saw the horses in Paris last June, when they were the property of Mr. Thorne, a rich banker. He refused to part with them when Mrs Vanderbilt's agents first applied, but he finally relented when he learned how she longed for them, and he sold her the pair for $12,000. They are demi-sang Percherons, and are pronounced the most beautifully matched pair of horses ever seen. They present a perfect equine picture. Having got the finest horses in Paris, Mrs. Vanderbilt determined to lure away the finest coachman. She made liberal offers to Guillot, the favorite postillion of Napoleon III., and he accepted them. So Mrs. Vandebilt will display to New Yorkers a turnout which for beauty, style and

THE CONDUCT OF A GUEST.

A Hostess Gives Valuable Hints on a Social

Suppose you are cordially invited to pass a week in a friend's house. Now, at the expiration of that week, if all the kings of all the nations are to assemble in that place on exhibition, you must not suggest to your hostess that you would like to remain another day if it would not inconvenience her. No matter if she is your own sister, you must remember that she has a husband whom it is her duty to please before all others; and you may not know what plans he has formed for the use of his home after the expiration of your visit.

Nothing can be more embarrassing for a hostess than to have a guest say: "If I thought it would not inconvenience you, I would stay over until after the concert,"

You should sing, play, recite, or dance, if He did try, writing a column editorial on you are able to do so, without being the subject of discussion—the opportunities offered to young men by the West. You must seek to give pleasure to your hosts, as well as receive it from them. Never tax your entertainers with your

If your visit is only half finished, it would be tasteful to make some excuse to be absent for a day at least on the husband's return.

Rob yourself of some pleasure rather than fail to make the servants some kind of a gift. The presence of a stranger in any house adds materially to the work, and servants do not get the pleasure out of entertaining which the host and hostess find. A little money or a gift of some kind imaginary banquet supposed to have been | will render servants gracious and obliging
