SPORTS OF THE SEASON.

Some of our friends are running away with the idea that PROGRESS made enough out of the base ball contest to start a bank. The correct and the uncorrect versions Goa little slower than that. PROGRESS made something but not enough to retire upon. Perhaps the greatest gain of the paper was in real increase of circulation. No person connected with PROGRESS will pretend to say that more than one quarter of the extra papers printed during the contest were distributed-that is circulated in the ordinary way. They were bought and the ballots cut from them and that was all.

But a very large number of papers found new buyers and those people will almost wholly be regular readers from this time forward. That was PROGRESS' great gain from the contest-new and regular readers. More than that, without doubt, in the increased value of advertising and the large amount that has offered. To bring it down to a point, the contest was a big and successful advertisement for this paper. Mr. Pushor got his $50 Monday morning,

With this exception there was present no specific feature which does not exist at other dances, but yet in some way a mysterious charm seemed to possess the house, making everyone ready to dance, and talk and laugh, and generally to enjoy oneself in a talk and laugh, and generally to enjoy oneself in a way that was novel and delightful. NEWMAN'S "TINKERED" HYMN.

It is an interesting fact that Cardinal NEW-MAN's great poem "Lead on, Kindly Light" was first published in America in 1862, in what is called a "tinkered" form.

NEWMAN wrote the poem in 1833, after a serious illness in Scicily. He was becalmed a short time afterward for a week in an orange boat between Sardinia and Corsica, and it is thought that during this delay the poem was written.

The story of how the poem was tinkered is interesting and is told by Dr. CHARLES ROBINSON, the editor of Songs of the Church, afterwards called, Songs for the Sanctuary. When compiling the hymns he received a packet of clippings from one of the highest authorities in the religious community. They were cut from papers, magazines, scrap books and some were rewritten. There were many gems in the collection and Dr. ROBINSON accepted them gladly. Among them was the poem "Lead on, Kindly Light," to which no name was appended and Dr. ROBINSON'S friend and helper said that he did not know who the author was, but that the poem had evidently been misprinted. "He proceeded to point out," says Dr. ROBINson, "that in writing the letter 'L' many task is. persons formed it very much like an 'S'; then also the letter 'n' when closed up at the top resembled an 'a'; so the compositor had most likely missed the significance, for as a fact the line began with what destroyed the whole meaning-'Lead kindly light amid.' This would have to be corrected so that it might read, 'Send kindly light amid the encircling gloom'; then something might be made of it for a hymn, and it could be put in the portion of the book for the choir to set to music. I thought the piece was very beautiful; nobody over this side of the water had ever told us who composed the poetry. This was nearly a whole year. Take part of this burden away.

Hampton Sent Votes to Pushor.

TO THE EDITOR OF PROGRESS: According to th umerous letters (no less than four) which I noticed in last week's issue of your paper, it would lead many to believe that Donovan obtained all the votes sent from this place. Such, however, was not the case. Pushor's many friends were by no means idle and for several days ballots were sent down in lots of from 15 to 50, and on Thursday morning over 100 went forward, all for Billy Pushor. No interest whatever was taken in it here until after the last game between the St. Johns and Shamrocks took place. After that the boys commenced to hustle efforts.

and it is stated that Hampton sent 2 to 1 for Pushor, which is doubtless within the mark, at all events. We are delighted that Pushor won the prize by such a splendid majority. Hurrah for the A. A. nine and their gentlemanly catcher. NED. Hampton, Sept. 10.

Moncton welcomes as a permanent citizen, Mr. W. W. Wells, of Dorchester, who has decided to cast in his lot with Moncton, and came this week to take up his abode with us. And just here let me pause to congratulate my valued contemporary of Dorchester on his restoration to health; when I read the Dorchester news the week before last I really feared that he was in for a severe attack of jaundice. We are so sorry that Moneton is not a little more like Dorchester, and that the Dorchester people will persist in coming here to live; but what can we do? We can't help being bright and enterprising and at-tractive, and we really do use the Moneton water as a beverage, though I can readily understand a resi-dent of the far famed "Dorchester Corner" being surprised to hear of people using water for any other purpose than washing and cooking. Do you re-member what the Boston lawyer said to the Phila-delphia man? "If Boston ever gets to be as dead as Philadelphia, we'll try and lay it out the same way." Well, if Moncton ever reaches the stage of deadness Dorchester has attained to, we will try to lay it out the same way, so that it may look beauti-ful in death. Mr. and Mrs. D. Chapman, of Amherst, were in Dorchester for a day or two, last week, visiting Mr. Chapman's parents.

Mr. Thomas Murray, agent of the Merchants' Bank, Sackville, was in Dorchester three times last week, twice to attend parties, and again on Sunday. Dorchester society seems to have quite roused it-self and shaken off its lethargy during the past few days, preparatory, no doubt, to its long winter's nap. On Wednesday evening last the Misses Chapman set the ball rolling by giving a delightful dance at their residence, "Brookside." The night
