Mrs. Tabor entertained a few of her mends last Saturday evening at a tea party. Mrs. John Black entertained the bread and butter club last evening at her residence, and they had a sheet and pillow case party which was exceedingly pleasant and afforded very much amusement, as it was almost impossible to tell the ladies and gentle-men apart. They were all draped in sheets with caps and turbans made out of the pillow cases, and all wore white masks, consequently everyone looked alike. The masks were kept on until after the alike. The masks were kept on until after the bread and butter was served at eleven o'clock. There was a great deal of merriment when these

He had been a sufferer from paralysis for some time and on Monday evening took a sudden turn for the worst. His grand daughter, Miss Agnes Wilmot, who was at the conversazione, was telephoned for, and Dr. Bridges, of Oromocto, who was also there; they immediately left for his bedside. Miss Jane Moore, sister of Mr. John Moore, city treasurer, who has been ill for some weeks, passed away on Monday. Mr. R. M. Stevens gave a large and most enjoy-able dance at her residence on St. George street on Monday evening. It was a delightful party from first to last, and thoroughly enjoyed by all those who attended it.

The many friends of the Rev. E S. W. Hick-man, of Dorchester, will be sorry to hear that he has been seriously ill. I believe Mr. Hickman intends going south, as soon as he is strong enough, to spend the remainder of the winter, and escape he chilling spring breezes. The entertainment was in every way a success, and considering the adverse circumstan-ces against which the boys have had to contend, there have done wondows. Not only did they lose one they have done wonders. Not only did they lose one they have done wonders. Not only did they lose one of their best end men, by the removal of Mr. W. C. Ross, two or three days before the performance, but also the interlocutor, but they filled up the gap bravely and gave a most excellent show. Here let me give them a word of sympathy for the extraordinary slowness of a Moncton audience in "catching on" to a joke. They must have found this peculiar trait very depressing indeed, and I felt truly sorry for them, especially as so very few of the jokes were stale, and none of them were vulgar. But

Mrs. Charles Stubbing invited a number of friends to unite themselves into a skating party on the private rink at H. M. S. dockyard. The harpers furnished good music and at the close of a pleas-ant afternoon the guests repaired to Mrs. Stubbing's ant afternoon the guests repaired to Mrs. Stubbing's residence for a five o'clock tea. Among others present, I may mention Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer, Miss J. Kenny, Miss Nagle, Miss Farrell, Miss John-stone, Mr. Grant, R. N., Mr. Oilver, Mr. Mc-Gowan, R. A., Captain and Mrs. Maxwell, R. N., Mr. and Mrs. Vizard, Captain Wright. Owing to the adverse elements on Feb. 3rd, Srd which programed many from withosing the

8rd, which prevented many from witnessing the carnival given on that date and gotten up by the subscribers to the "private afternoon rink," it was lecided to repeat the masquerade, and on Monday evening last a large number of spectators crowded the exhibition building, many among them having been present on the first night, but came again eager to obtain a second view of the lovely cos tumes and graceful skaters. The ice was in goo condition, and at 8 p. m., the West Riding struck up one of their spirited marches, to the music of which glided on the rink the skaters in processiona form. At first two by two, then four deep and so on. The scene was fairy-like, and what rendered the charming effect was in that the costumes were so varied, hardly two being alike. Among a bewildering array of brilliant characters glittering queens and diamonded dukes we single "Titania"-fair golden haired, tiny Titania with her shining scepter and crown studded with precious gems—decidedly to my idea the loveliest costume of the evening and adopted by Mrs. C. C. Hole, one of our prettiest and adopted by Mrs. C. C. Hole, one of our prettiest and most popular young brides. Mrs. Nesbitt was very splendid, and very regal as "Yum Yum"; her dress was of white satin eleganted embroidered in gold, a broad gold sash, and small golden fans stuck in the hair completed this lovely costume. Mrs. Fred Jones as "Madame Hortones" charmed overwhead, and her sister. Miss Hortense" charmed everybody, and her sister, Miss Clara Nagle as "Dorothy Foster" looked sweet. The minuet was also rendered, and passed off even more smoothy than on the first night. In a word the Carnival was a success from beginning to end, and the spectators came away feeling that had entrance fees been placed at a hundred instead of seventy-five cents it would have been cheap at the

On this same evening Mr. Lytell, of the Lytell Dramatic Company, was tendered a benefit at the Academy of Music. Notwithstanding the counter attraction at the riak a bumper house enthusiastically greeted Mr. Lytell when he appeared as "Conn the Shaughrann," the role suiting him to perfection, and a more perfect Irish scapegrace I have never seen. As this was the company's last performance two or three of the best actors having last week left for Boston, Miss Grant, one of our amateurs undertook the part of "Arte O'Neal," and though not quite up to the standard, didn't do so very badly Lieutenant Marshall, of the West Riding, offered his services as "Captain Molineux," and played as only can one who possess true professional talent. At the close of each act Mr. Lytell was repeatedly called before the audience. On one of which occasions he made a short speech, thanking the public for the patronage which they had extended towards the company. He also remarked that after Easter they should open another season at the Academy. He stated his intention of reinforcing his troops, and also spoke of several new plays which he hoped to produce here on his return, principal among which is to be the Soudan, a very brilliant "Morceau" I am told; consequently we will await with much impatience the return of this enterprising and energetic actor. The third Orpheus concert of the season came off on Thursday, 5th inst. It was the best which has on Inursday, oth inst. It was the best which has yet taken place. Among new soloists was Mrs. Percy Lear, whose fine mezzo soprano elicited uni-versal admiration. Her selection, "Fleeting days" is one of the sweetest ballads I have ever heard. Mr. Gillis was in exceedingly good voice, and that pretty thing of Denza's "Star of My Heart" suited his tenor perfectly. The choruses were particularly well rendered, especially "The Magic of Spring." Miss Lane's "qui de contrabbandier," from Carmen, was of course voted the piece of the evening. The sad tidings that we are to enjoy the music of this sweet singer but a few months longer, were at first almost more than we could bear. Yes, in the sum mer, she leaves us to reside permanently in the United States, yet we cannot blame her leaving us. Halifax is too small to fix so bright a star as Miss Louise Lane. Do you dance the "Militaire" over in your country ? I should sometime like to have your opinion of this style of dance, Several of our people have been airing in the newspapers their views on this subject. If we should lend a willing ear and follow out the ideas of certain cranks, the militaire would meet with a sudden and untimely death. Certainly it cannot boast of its popularity on ac-count of its grace. I consider it nothing more or less than a wild romp, which seems to become certain absurd young folks who must have some outlet to over exuberance of spirits. But when married ladies, matrons, some of them already possessing those three virtues-fair, fat and when these, I say, in a ball-room attempt the one two, three, kick ! I think it is high time to abolish "Militaire," burying it in the depths of the sea, so that it may never, never revive any more.

[PROGRESS is for sale in Moncton at the book stores of W. W. Black and W. H. Murray, Main

I really think I should go out on a strike, until things quieted down if it were; be-cause the social items take up all my time now, and the political situation seems to have a way of varying with such truly surprising rapidity, that what was written one day, would have to be erased the next, even as Penelope ravelled out each morning the work she had done the night before.

Moncton kept up its reputation for gaiety, till the very end of the season, and we have stepped into Lent with a suddenness that has almost taken our breath away. Indeed the transformation was so wery sudden that I am afraid a great many of us wondered why we had fish for dinner in the middle of the week; while the fact that there was no service in St. George's church, a thing that has not happened for years, tended to increase our feeling that something was out of gear.

Mrs. R. A. Borden gave a most enjoyable dance, last Friday evening, at her home on Botsford street. There were between 60 and 70 guests, just enough to comfortably fill the rooms without crowding, and dancing was kept up with spirit until the hours "began to dwindle," with perhaps a rather longer interval than usual devoted to the enjoynent of the delicious supper. Mr. and Mrs. Borden are perfect hosts and their guests never fail to enjoy emselves. I do not know to whom the honor of belleship belonged, but probably, as it is too often the case, "honors were even."

Knights of the Throttle en Fete.

Moncron, Feb. 9.—"There was a sound of revelry" in the vicinity of the Pythian Temple Friday evening last, the occasion being a social dance and supper under the auspices of Division No. 162, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engi-neers. Some few weeks ago the Division decided on giving the entertainment, with the intention of making it an annual affair, should the success of the maiden effort warrant their doing so, and are to be congratulated on the unqualified success of their undertaking. Much credit is due the committee, Messrs. Sinclair, Donald, Hunter, Hayward, Cook and McGuiggan, with P. Ashe as Secretary, for their indefatigable labors in arranging and carrying to successful completion, the almost perfect details of the affair.

The decorations were both suitable and elaborate. On entering the ball room the attention was arrested by an almost life-size painting of a locomotive, covering the entire end of the hall, and bearing the No. 162, (the number of the Division) showing the Engineer at his post, with hand on throttle, headlight burning, ready for the road. Directly above this was a motto, bearing the welcome of the Brotherhood, while bunting and colored lanterns were festooned from pillar to pillar, and arched gracefully above the windows. At nine o'clock the "signal" was given, and the opening march was made to the music of a full orchestra, and participated in by about sixty couples, and from that onward "all vent merry as a marriage bell.'

Invitations had been extended to sister divisions and St. John, Halifax, Truro and Newcastle were represented.

Dancing was indulged in until the wee small hours with an intermission for an elegant supper which was served in the upper hall, or lodge room of the building, and which proved to be the crown-ing feature of the evening, reflecting much credit on the Queen hotel which catered for the occasion. The tables, radiant with spotless linen, silver and glass groaning under the load of good things provided, and surrounded by "fair women and brave men" formed a most pleasing and refreshing pic-ture, and the supper was, without doubt, the finest that has been gotten up in this city for some years. After supper dancing was continued, and at daybreak the company separated, all voting it a grand success in every particular, and all looking forward to the next annual re-union. It would be unfair to particularize when all looked so well. Many of the dresses worn being tasteful and becoming, and very elegant. Much diversity of opinion was expressed as to whom the honor of being belle belonged. To the masculine mind, Miss McCann, of St. John, seemed to be the favorite in that respect, but was so closely pressed by the home ladies, noticeably, Misses Starkey and McNeil, that the question would be a difficult one to decide. On the whole the affair was most creditable and the reputation of the Moncton Division of the B. L. E. as entertainers, is past days-a sort of grand rally, I suppose, before settling down to sack cloth and ashes during the dull Lenten season. There have been dances, five o'clocks, euchre parties, carnivals and sleigh drives, following one another in delightfully rapid succession, keeping the fashionable belle in a constant flutter of excitement from morning until night. It is said that during the coming weeks, amusement will be of so mild a type as to enable her to gain some "Beauty Sleep," and then reappear at Easter with charms renewed for fresh conquest.

On Shrove Tuesday a dance was given by Sir John Ross at his residence "Bellevue." It was small but very select, only the creme de la creme being present. On dit, that this enterta inment was a farewell to Major and Mrs. Bagot, who leave for England on Saturday by the mail steamer. The favored guests "tripped the light fantastic" to the

FEB. 11.-The most charming entertainment for children that has ever been given here, was Mrs. W. F. Todd's childrens reception on Wednesday last. The reception was given for the amusement of Mrs. Todd's little daughters, Winnefred and Bordia, and their young friends, of whom 111 were present. Dancing, of course, was the chief amusement, although in the upper part of the house the jolly games of "coach" and "copenhagen" were so well adapted to a party; its spacious drawing friends at tea, at the Windsor Hotel on Thursday greatly enjoyed. Mrs. Todd's handsome house is rooms, halls, and library would each make a ball room. The hours of the reception were from 5 to 10 o'clock. Supper was served at 7, and lasted until 9 o'clock. It was a lovely party. The pretty faces and gay dresses of the girls, and the bright, eager beauty of the boys, together with the elegant surroundings, made a picture one will long remember. The young hostesses received their guests in the drawing room, and looked very pretty in bright cardinal dresses, prettily trimmed with black velvet. The belle of the party was Miss May Clerke, a little lady of nine years, who wore a lovely dress of pale pink cashmere with trimmings of lace and sash of pink surah silk. All the young ladies looked so pretty, and wore such gay, bright dresses that I have only a confused, dim idea of them, and shall only be able to describe a few of
