future. A party of gentlemen will leave town tomorrow to visit one of the sugar camps up above Kingsclear. A party of ladies and gentlemen visited Mr.

IcNally's camp last week. For a few days last week the skating was excellent on the river. On Thursday Mr. Frank Burton skated down to St. John to spend his holidays, and on Friday several young gentlemen skated do Sheffield. Among the number was Mr. Charlie McCullough, who spent his easter holidays with his friend, Mr. George Day. Mr. Morley McLaughlin also skated as far as Sheffield.

The flower decorations in the churches on Sunday were simply perfect with a profusion of exquisite roses and lilies, beside other lovely flowers, and the music was also very fine. The day was lovely, giv-ing us a taste of spring and the attendance at all the urches was very large.

Word has been received here that both Mr. and Mrs. Hilyard are ill with la grippe in Washington. I am pleased to be able to say that most of the sufferers here are now improving, although there are some who are still confined to their homes; ong these are Judge and Mrs. Steadman.

r the last few days. Miss Maud McLean spent her Easter holidays with her friends in St. John, also Miss Shaw. The cob-web party given by Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Allen, Wednesday evening, was a great success. The first thing that attracted your attention on opening the door, was one vast labyrinth of red, blue above the paper all ready to begin writing at the and pink twine right over your head. of potted plants, arranged in a well designed plan on the platform. At either side of the desk was a cone-shaped mass of plants towering up about twenty feet. The front of the desk was completely hidden by a mass of white edged geraniums and is the sergeant." Shortly the reason of the sertwenty feet. The front of the desk was completely ivies. Beautiful callas and roses spread sweet perfume on the air. The music in this church is always good, but on Easter, especially fine. The Misses Shenton and Mr. Winter were the soloists. The baptist church rejoices in the possession of a well trained male quartette, composed of Messus. Estey, Richards, Cooper and Spurden, whose selections on this occasion were ably supplemented by Mrs.

Currie as soloist. Thoughtful friends did not forget the Victoria hospital on Easter day. The patients numbering ten, were presented by the Y's with sweet posies, while each nurse received a flowering plant. It is a rule of the Y's never to make a gift without an accompanying text, so to each bunch was attached a little card, bearing a few words of comfort. These texts were as much appreciated by the sick ones as the flowers. The hospital has working for it a number of young ladies in town banded together as the Hospital Aid society. These support one free bed, costing $200 a year. Besides these, quite a few of the young ladies call and read to the patients. Among these ladies are the Misses Hunter, Miss Roberts, Miss Bessie Everett and Miss Johnston. Almost any Sunday afternoon, Mrs. Boyce may be found reading in her soft English voice little tracts such as might be found in an English hospital. The sweet lady whose kind heart was first prompted to establish the hospital has also made herself known to the patients during her short stay in the city.

Morning prayers at the house are quite an interesting ceremony. Precisely as the hour hand reaches ten the sergeent at arms conducts the speaker and the chaplain in. The reverend doctor kneels at the small table and pours forth his intercessions in his rich voice that cannot fail to make an impres-sion on the hearers. Dr. McLeod makes a very beautiful praver, one clause of which is for the nembers of the government herein assembled. Unfortunately Mr. Blair and Mr. Pugsley were not in their seats the morning I was there, so they couldn't reap any of the benefits. The speaker, the sergeant at arms, and the little pages get down devoutly on their knees. It is a becoming attitude to the speaker whose silken robe stretches out on the carpet like that of a bride as she kneels at the altar. The other members worship very much as above the paper all ready to begin writing at the final amen. Others are very devout, and really seem to enter into the worship in spirit and in truth. During an evening session the house presents a very pretty appearance. The two arc lights suspended from the glittering chandeliers vie with the many flickering gas jets in showing up the portraits of departed worthies and worthies not yet de parted. On the floor of the house are the members and about 50 interested spectators, masculine, while at the speaker's right is seated a bevv speaker's right is seared a pevy of 30 or more equally interested spectators, feminine. The galleries also are well filled, but present on the whole a sombre appear. ance, the prevailing color being black, with an occasional red blazer or toque to relieve the monotony. The ladies form a very critical audience and the solemn law makers would squirm in their chairs could they hear some of the remarks made upon their speech-making abilities and likewise their personal appearance. Mr. Blair's appearance is a subject of general conversation about which there is great unanimity of opinion. Everybody concedes Mr. Blair to be the handsomest man on the floor of the house, with Mr. Stockton a close second. Grey hairs, you see, have the advantage in the eyes of the ladies. When Mr. Blair's political self is discussed there is apt to be some spice in the remarks. The majority of the ladies are "sot in their minds" as to Mr. Blair's being a friend or a fiend, and only a few are lukewarm enough to say, "I really haven't thought of it. I don't know which side 1 am on." However, they may agree with the wisdom or righteousness (for women are great sticklers as to nice shades of right and wrong) of the leader's measures, none dispute his knowledge of human nature, and his infinite skill in measuring the powers of triend and foe and adjusting his course

Some of the habits of the legislators remind one of the impecunious rounders at Ottawa who buy their lunches at a ten-cent hash house and go to the parliament buildings to pick their teeth. There is one member who owns and displays a spick and span new pair of shoes. When his seat mate goes a-visiting, said member twists the two chairs around to face each other, and carefully adjusts his avoirdupois upon the two so that the soles of his boots in all their newness are quite visible to the ladies' gallery, and to see things the better was seated on the rail with his back to the members. He was about making his adieus before leaving for the geant's disapproving nods dawned upon him, and quick as a flash, he left his perch upon the pro-hibited rail and slipped into a seat beside one of the young ladies. The members who had been watching the proceedings of the sergeant with interest, uted and roared with laughter, and Mr. Blair's speech was completely drowned by the pounding on the desks. As for Mr. McQueen, after one gasp he rocked backward and forward in a gale of mirth. I wonder what joke Mr. McQueen will play upon Mr. McKeown to square accounts. Half past seven in the morning is an early hour to start out on a "pleasure exertion," as Josiah Allen's wife puts it. At that time Saturday, a party con-sisting of Mr. and Mrs. Inch, Miss Thorne, the Misses Harvey, Miss Vandine, and Messrs. Palmer and Foster started on a twenty mile drive to Mr. McNally's maple sugar camp. They spent the day in watching the process of sugar making from be-The return trip was much ening to end. livened by a pair of baulky horses, so that it was necessary for the party to get out occasionally and CELESTE. try shanks' mare.

Dickie, J Johnson, Alex. McDonald and H. Wheelhouse, made a great show, their choruses being very well ren-dered. Among the musical attractions of the evening were two banjo solos, given by Master Harry Metzler, of Moncton. The mock initiation was the choice of the evening, Mr. J. MARCH 31 .- The Nova Scotia fruit growers association was in session here Thursday and Friday of last week, and in consequence there were many unfamiliar faces to be met. The sparrow isn't very big, but he furnished as much subject for debate as he would if he were a sacred ibis, and the question ( as to whether or not he is for or against the fruit grower, is worthy of ranking side by side with that of the failure or otherwise of marriage. It was a stormy meeting. It has even been intimated that some of the members would have got more satisfaction out of it if they had had the foresight to beat their pruning-hooks into boxing gloves and bring them along, but the old secretary was re-elected by a very large majority, notwithstanding. The degree of M. D. has been conferred by the Ecletic Medical college, New York, upon Miss Alice G. Blackadder of Woltville. The success of Dr. Blackadder will be heard of with pleasure by her friends. Before entering college she took a full course in one of the largest hospitals in New York. The graduating exercises took place in Chickering hall. Miss Blackadder stood third in her class, and on commencement day received many bouquets from her admiring friends. We all wish Dr. Blackadder every success.

Mr. Lemont has gone across the border and will bring home Mrs. Lemont. At last one of our most immovable bachelors has fallen a victim to Cupid's assaults and will bring home a bride. How is it that these gentlemen who take so long to make a choice, always go elsewhere for brides? Mrs. F. B. Edgecombe is a St. Stephen hady and Mrs. McNutt from Halifax, and now it is Bangor that will do the deed. I never saw a man so thoroughly saturated with proper parliamentary expressions as the Hon. Mr. Pugsley. He carefully guards against giving the lie direct, and long practice enables him to clothe his harshest facts in elegant and soothing sentences. A rebuke from Mr. Pugsley is like a sugar-coated pill. Nothing could upset his equini- mity. One would like to have known him in his college days, and one wonders how he behaved when as a verdant freshie he got tossed in a blanket. But the past is locked up behind that careful smile. No matter how great the pain borne no record of it is visible upon that calm face. Mr. Powell's smooth face, queer little side whiskers, and hair combed straight forward with just a slight ruffling in front, only require a stock wound high around his neck to make him a living copy of a portrait of one of the statesmen a hundred	APRIL 1.—Mr. John Sivewright returned Satur- day from a short trip to Fredericton and St. John.
