This week I have to announce the death of Mrs. DeMill, widow of the late Nathan S. DeMill, and daughter of the late Elisha Budd, of Digby. Mrs. DeMill was in her eighty-seventh year, and had been in poor health for some time past; but her death at last came quite unexpected. She was in full possession of all her faculties up to the time of her death, displaying in her closing years the fine qualities of mind which characterized her early life. The funeral took place on Sunday from her late residence, Bay Shore, and was largely attended by the friends of the children of the deceased lady and many prominent members of the baptist church, of which she had been a member for nearly half a century. Rev. E. Hickson conducted the services at the house and also at the rural cemetery. The chief mourners at the grave were her three sons, Mr. A. H. DeMill, Mr. Frederick DeMill and Mr. Arthur DeMill.

On Monday Mr. Henry Haviland, a well known and respected resident died very suddenly of heart disease. Last winter Mr. Haviland fell on the ice and hurt himself, since that his health has been very precarious, but his death was not expected. Mr. Haviland leaves two sisters—who have lived with him for years, to mourn the loss of a kind brother.

A GRATEFUL ALLIGATOR.

Once Befriended She Makes Annual Visits to Her Benefactor.

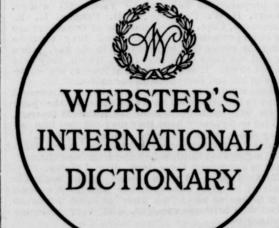

There is an old man who lives not a dozen miles from Jacksonville, Florida, on the St. John's River, who has what might be called an alligator farm. He owns a tract of about twelve or thirteen acres, and in one part is a low, marshy place, which, in wet weather, is filled with water. A ditch connects this with the river.

One spring day the owner of the farm while walking near the swamp heard a crashing sound in the marsh grass, and looking over to the center saw a large mud and grass. After a time, when the heap had assumed a shape not unlike that of a hut such as the Esquimaux are pictured as living in, the alligator lay on top. The farmer came to the conclusion that she was laying her eggs, and, not wishing to disturb her, left.

bedded all around, while the old 'gator lay sunning herself on a log. Each day he visited the place and carried food to the old one in the shape of fish and meat, and as the time went on she got so tame that on a certain hour she was on the lookout and came crawling up to be fed. One morning he was startled by a loud bellowing in the direction of the swamp, and hastening over found things in a high state of excitement. There, lying in a pool of water, was the old mother, surrounded by numerous little alligators, some of which climbed upon her back and then slid off, seeming to enjoy the fun im-mensely. At the sight of her friend a bright light beamed in her eyes, and after receiving a tew caresses she started off toward the river, tollowed by her young. Every spring after that the owner of the Worshipping the Flag.

The viceroy, officers and soldiers of the Chinese army, when they are about to start on a war-like expedition, must worship their flag. The time selected is about day-break. It is necessary that all the officers who are to accompany the expedition should not only witness the ceremony but take a part in it. The same remark is true of the soldiers who are to be sent away or engage in the fight.
