All seemed to enjoy the afternoon and felt grateful to the Rev. Father Hayden for his thoughtfulness. Many will regret to learn that the assemblies that proved so popular the past few winters are to be discontinued this winter, at least as far as the last year management is concerned; that, however, need not, as they say, deter others from taking the matter in hand. The managers of the past did their work nobly and laborious work it proved at times. Some one else should relieve them. I hear that some think of running them in the South End. I think the management could not find a more desirable place than Templar hall, N. E. Nov. 4 .- Hallowe'en, that old fashioned time of merrymaking, has come and gone again. By the way, is it not an old fashioned festival? It seems to me that the lads and lasses, the youths and maidens of now-a-days scarcely know when the night comes round. Is there no attraction to them in the special games and frolics peculiar to Hallowe'en? Those who cannot call to mind pleasant memories of that time have certainly lost experiences worth remembering. Nothing could be nicer than a merry party of congenial friends gathered to celebrate the return and invoke the presence of the "hob-goblins" and special sprites that are abroad that night. Such a variety of tricks and games, too, by which the participants are sure (?) to learn who are to be their partners in life's journey.

As no "little bird" whispered of any such gather. ing, I will conclude there was none, for "little birds" usually whisper loud enough to be heard. Town parties are almost entirely given up to lancing and whist, with a musical evening shrown in at rare intervals. These are all ver pleasant, only the great dearth is to be regretted, and vastly to be preferred to some of those awful country gatheriugs where the guests seat themselves on chairs placed close to the wall and sit, each afraid to raise his or her voice above a low monotone, scarcely daring to respond to the sometimes frantic efforts of the host or hostess to find something for their amusereturning to live in Kentville. We are at last to have the electric light. It is at last to be put into some of the shops and public buildings, and let us hope that the town will find ways and means for lighting the streets with it.

The ordinary street lamps will seem dimmer than ever by contrast. The building for the apparatus is pany," which gave such delightful concerts a short time ago, are contemplating another entertainment. If so, we are sure to have a treat, as the others were thoroughly enjoyable. These concerts also assure us that we still have some native talent which otherwise might be left to lie dormant, for, except in our choirs, there seems to be very little opportunity for the public to enjoy that home talent which surely must exist. Suppose a voice is not perfectly trained, although that is so altogether desirable, is it not possible to enjoy a song which is sweetly given, even if it is not artis tically finished?
