MONCTON.

[Progress is for sale in Moncton at the book stores of W. W. Black and W. H. Murray, Main

Aug. 5 .- I think the past week has been one of the very quietest in this quiet summer. I don't think the general stagnation can be credited to languor caused by the extreme heat either, because we have not had any of that kind of heat so far. By the way, there seems to be an opinion prevailing in the rural districts that because Moncton is not always either shrouded in fog or having its trees and climate here is tropical. Now, I don't deny that a most enjoyable one. when we undertake to have summer we have it. we are very much given to having the very best of everything, if we can possibly get it, so we like to know when it is summer without looking at the almanae to be certain. And we are not satisfied with a little too warm to have a fire all the time, and much too cold to be quite comfortable without one. We can wear cotton dresses and linen dusters, straw hats, and white flannel tennis suits, without catching pneumonia, and we have lots of fruit and grasshoppers and flies, and every summer luxury except mosquitoes, which are almost unknown, and yet there is seldom a day without a cool breeze, and never an evening when one would care to sit on the front steps, or hang over the garden gate, after half past seven, without dawning a shawl, if she happens to be a lady, or exchanging his gaudy blazer for the less picturesque but more comfortable tweed coat of every day wear, if he belongs to the sex that rules, and if he undertakes to sleep under less than two blankets, ne will be certain to catch his death of cold. Now, having proved, at least to my own satisfaction, that Moncton possesses a more than temperate climate, I will go back to the point from which I started, which was, I think, that there were other causes for our extreme quietude than warm weather. One is, that we are all looking forward to a very brilliant social event, which is to take place early next week, being a no less important function than the wedding of one of the "Three Fair Maids," the invitations for which have been out since last week. I refer to Miss Weldon, who is to be married to Mr. Gordon Blair, of the bank of Montreal, on Tuesday evening. The wedding will take place in St. George's church, and will be a very large one. Of course all minor events sink into insignificance before a wedding.

The promenade concert on the athletic grounds last Wednesday evening was so successful that the management have determined to extend it into a serial, to be continued each week, until further notice. Some six hundred were present last week, which would mean $60, a sum not by any means to be despised. The bicycle race was won by Mr. Albert Metzler, with its accompanying prize, a bronze clock. Mr. A. B. Sweezey won the prize for best decorated bicycle. The foot race was won by Mr. Bert Taylor, and the watch at the summit of the greased pole went begging since no one succeeded in quite winning it, though Master James Bruce did gallant work in attempiing the feat, and many people thought the prize should have been awarded to him. The cornet band discoursed sweet music. A lighted balloon was sent up, which caught fire promptly and evaporated without doing any damage. The grand stand was illuminated with Chinese lanterns and colored switch lamps, and five electric lights added brilliancy to the scene. The second promenade concert takes place tonight.

Another fishing party left town Monday evening to make war on the scaley denizens of the Tracadie river. Of course we are all aware that trout have no scales, but then they ought to have, so poetical license is admissible. The party consisted of Messrs. T. V. Cooke, W. H. Murray, G. J. Butcher, M. Lodge and W. Hood. They will be absent for ten days and doubtless have a delightful time.

The ladies of the auxiliary society naturally feel proud of having paid the $1000 pledged by them some months before the time named for payment. The amount, and $9 over, was paid last week.

Mr. W. C. Taylor, one of Moncton's oldest and most respected residents, died yesterday at his residence on Steadman street. Mr. Taylor suffered from a very severe attack of grippe a year ago, and never fully recovered, having been in failing health ever since. He leaves a widow, four sons and two ever since. He leaves a widow, four sons and two daughters, Messrs. R. T., C. E. and Samuel Taylor of Moncton, and George Taylor, now in the North-West, Mrs. T. D. ## MODERN SURGERY.

Wonderful Operations that the Human Body Can Stand. The extent to which the body can be mutilated without a fatal result is beyond what most people think. Of course, the removal of the largest limb is a familiar fact; and indeed, the successive removal of all the limbs would result in nothing worse than inconvenience. But in the same way internal organs may be extirpated. This is facilitated by their duality. One eye may be taken out, and the sight remain practically unimpaired. One kidney may be removed, and the other will make up the loss by doing double work. The case is essentially the same when disease has destroyed the functional activity of a kidney; and, therefore, a person in that condition need not be without hope. In like manner, disease may have rendered one lung solid, like liver, and thus functionally useless, and yet the person may live in good health to old age. Could the half-consumed lung of the consumptive only heal up the walls of its great ulcer, and the microbes cease to extend their ravages, the patient might, with care, enjoy a long, useful and happy life.

Large portions of the brain may be removed with no injury to life or intellect. Persons have lived for years, and been well with bullets in the brain. The liver has been cut in two by tight lacing-the pressure causing an atrophy of the part be-low—without ending either the life or the folly of the fashionable devotee.

A portion of the intestines has been cut out and the severed ends sewed together, and their normal action and function have not been in the least interfered with. And what seems more amazing, dogs have had their entire stomachs extirpated without impairing digestion.

Recently a man, fifty-seven years old, had a large portion of his stomach cut out, in consequence of a tumor. The piece was nearly a foot square. The dissevered parts were sewed together, and the patient ate a dinner of hash twelve days after the operation, and was dismissed cured at the end of three weeks. Five months later he was presented before the medical society the royal society of physicians of Vienna -wholly well, with no trace of the return of the cancerous disease, and with digestion perfectly performed.

Some experts are led to think that the stomach plays but a secondary part as a grounds yesterday and today. Excursion trains ran | digestive organ, its chief service, according

Another author writes of a soldier who mounted a half-domesticated zebra. The creature, after making the most furious attempts to get rid of its rider, plunged over a steep bank into the river, and threw the soldier as it emerged.

While the man lay half-stunned upon the ground, the zebra quietly walked up to him and bit off one of his ears. Zebras can never be tamed, unless the process is begun while they are still very young. H. A. Bryden gives an instance of a tragic fate which befell one of them, captured when he was seven or eight years old.

He had joined a troop of horses belonging to one of the author's friends, and finally allowed himself to be driven with them into a kraal, or enclosure. It was then determined to keep him, and if possible to domesticate him.

For this purpose he was lassoed and tied | to Charlottetown, I. E. I., to a tree; but so ferocious was he in the presence of man that the greatest precautions had to be observed in approaching him. All possible means were taken to induce him to feed. When captured he was in splendid condition, and his coat shone in the sun. THE fame of Sir John A. Macdonald is so great and unique in Canada that many biographies of him are sure to be published. For the most part these will be what are vulgarly called "fakes," intended only as catchpennies, and necessarily defective because their authors have not had access to the original sources of information. The Biography by his nephew, Col. J. P. Macpherson, M. A., A. D. C., was approaching completion when the distinguished Statesman died, and the author is now at work on the Statesman died, and the author is now at work on the final chapters. The late premier revised the MSS. in part before his death. This will, of course be the biography, and the only one having the direct approval of the family. It is to be published in two handsomely bound volumes by the Earle Publishing House, of St. John, N. B., being printed on superior paper and profusely and artistically illustrated. No Canadian of whatever political party should con-Canadian, of whatever political party, should consider his library complete without this work, which cannot fail to be an interesting synopsis of the recent
