Terpsichore.

Sunday last had been appointed a day of thanksgiving in the episcopal churches of this diocese.
The weather was chilly and disagreeable, as befits that season when no longer "green things are growing." Many of the churches were made beautiful with tangible proofs of the bounteous harvest.
In Trinity, especially, the decorations were exquisite, wood as well as field sending tribute.
Roses, white and red over-wreathed the communion table; the lectern sprang from an artistic confusion of fruit, flowers and vegetables scattered upon moss. On pulpit and chancel rails appeared grains, flowers and grasses set against rich clusters of glowing crabs and green and purple grapes. The gas shone out from a golden circling of sheaves of heavy grain, held in place by dainty bunches of crab-apples. Service and sermon were appropriate to the occasion. All according well with the fair "outward and visible" tokens of cause for thanksgiving.

MORAL - INSURE. of the ceremony: On Wednesday, September 30th, at St. Simon's church, Toronto, were united in the bonds of holy matrimony Ernest T. Wood, son of Thomas Wood, Esq., of Richmond, Surrey, England, and Anna Eleanor Mabel, only daughter of Captain Hooper, late of H. M. 76th regiment and grand-daughter of the late Rev. John Hooper, rector of Albany, Surrey, England, and of the late generable Archdeacon Coster, of New Brunswick. The day was perfect, the scene as impressive as it was beautiful. The artistic manner in which the church was decorated for the harvest festival adding to its brightness, and never was a more reverent and orderly congregation

While waiting for the bridal party the organist, Mr J. W. Harrison, played in his well-known masterly way several beautiful selections. Among which Boscovity's "Chant du Matin" with its little tender subtleties of light and shade, seemed descriptive of the opening chapter of the two young lives about to be united. At last she came, the centre of attraction for all eyes, leaning upon her father's arm, a fair sweet bride, the roses in her cheeks a trifle paler than usual, the rich simplicity of the white satin glimmering through the soft folds of the long veil, which fell to her feet, and was fastened on the shapely head by a spray of orange blossom, and white roses. 2 GASES CHILDS' SPRING HEEL BUTTON BOOTS, very cheap. 1 CASE MISSES' SPRING HEEL BUTTON BOOTS, on the shapely head by a spray of orange blossom, and white roses. Entering at the west porch the choir preceded her singing hymn 579 (A.D.M.) The seven bridesmaids were: Miss Montgomery Campbell, (Fredericton, N. B.); Miss Kate Eddis, (Toronto); Miss Marian Scarnell, (St. John, N. B.), and four sweet little children, Eleanor and Penelope Leith, and Marjorie Gambier—Bousfield, cousins of the bride, and Frances Harrison. The service was admirably conducted by the Rev. E. Bertram Hopper, brother of the bride and rector of St. George's church, Moncton, N. B., assisted by the Rev. T. Street Mecklem, rector of St. Simon's church and was choral throughout, the responses of both bride and bridegroom being clear and distinct. The ceremony was followed by a celebration of the Holy communion, after which the time-honoured strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march brought the ceremony to a close, and was the signal for the invited guests to repair to the residence of Capt. Hooper, in Rosedale, there to partake of his and Mrs. Hooper's hospitality. Speeches were made, health's G. B. HALLETT, - - - 108 KING STREET. ENGRAVING.
