Oct. 14 .- The melancholy days are come, the saddest of the year for our house-keepers and our matrons, society belles, and even debutantes are pressed into service, and these shining lights of our society are busily engaged in setting their houses in "apple pie" order, and racking their poor little tired brains with the unsolved problem that has puzzled generations of defunct house-keepers, whether after all by this annual raising of clouds of Tuesday. dust they have found the best way out of it, I fear too many, alas, realize that they have not, and that "the game is not worth the candle." Meanwhile their poor miserable victims, the "man of the house," the fathers and brothers go about with a generally uncared for look, a sort of hopelessness fact had at last dawned on them that there were tion," but poor miserable subjects of a most despotic sovereignty. How are the mighty fallen!

If one goes to call on one of these dear little queens of a period they are told that "she is not at are granted for a kitchen reception, and there the nttle woman is found, surrounded by all the appliances of her art, and deeply engaged in the mystery of preserving. There is sugar here, sugar there, there is sugar there, there is sugar there, sugar there, there is sugar camp. "Snowdrop" can but rejoice at the sight (all the more as she is not in it) because all this "hub a dub" means future festivities, and she expects to sample each and all these embryo jams, jellies and various "sweets" at the coming high teas, suppers, luncheons, etc., that even now are rumored. As for the high priestess herself, no "lightning change" of costume of the best specialist in his line could so completely change his identity, as the absence of all the little trickeries of the toilette has changed our little friend from the belle of society into a poor little Cinderella, or shall I say a belle of the kitchen instead? Her precious "fedora flufi" is replaced by a lot of hideous curl papers, and her "stuning costume du ball" by various nondescript bits of appare!. The "tout ensemble" is ludricous in the extreme. A few hours later! Can it be possible that the dainty little lady we meet is our quondom maid of the morning? A searching look, answered by a nod and smile, tells us it is the dear little thing herself, arrayed in the most beming and perfect fitting of visiting costumes, together with the cutest and sauciest little toque, her fluffy fedora as "taking" as ever, card case in hand and intent in paying her "duty calls," she is again transformed into a bright little butterfly, and one of our belles of society. One of these days the fortunate man who wins her will prove to his friends affectionate wife, and shine in the society for which she is fitted as well. I understand that the game supper at Hotel Sears, Midgic, that was to have been given for Mrs. Harrison on Thursday evening had to be postponed on account of the storm, much to the disappointment of everybody concerned, (which included a number of friends from Dorchester,) but more especially the recipient of the honor, as she was obliged to leave for her home in Boston on the following morning, having enjoyed a delightful visit of three weeks among us. Her friends were loath to say good-bye, but their regret was tempered by the hope of a onger visit before many months. She was accom panied to the station by a number of her friends who wished her a pleasant journey and a safe arrival at her home.

I am wondering why some of our young people do not inaugurate walking parties this fine autumn weather. Once I was staying at a pleasant town and made one at these parties. We met every afternoon when fine, sometimes only twice a week, at a convenient rendezvous, and had a pleasant tramp to gather nuts, ferns, or autumn leaves, returning to the home of one of our number (in turn) for tea, no difference being made for us in the cuisine. Afterwards we spent a pleasant evening, and before parting arranged for our next tramp. These little affairs made some of the happiest hours of my

Mrs. Joseph L. Black left on Friday morning last en route to Brooklyn, New York, on a visit to her sister, Mrs. Lucius Dickson. I understand she will be away some weeks.

I am sorry to hear that Mr. Ernest L. Ford finds it necessary to again try a change of climate for the benefit of his health. He left on Tuesday evening for Shafter, Texas. The deputy minister of marine, Mr. Smith, was Quite a number of the matrons and young ladies of Sackville as well as several gentlemen, were in Dorchester for the McQueen-Chapman nuptials. I understand that they "held their own among the brilliant sisters of the shiretown." Among them were Mrs. Ryan and sister in law, Mrs. Horace Fawcett, also Miss Estabrooks; each of these ladies were the property of the second of these ladies are the second of the second wore becoming street costumes; Mr. and Mrs. H. Berton Allison, and last, but not least, "Our fair Bostonian" in a most stylish dress of black homespun with panel and vest of violet rep covered with black silk passementerie, a lovely jet toque and pearl colored suede gloves. I heard several remarks "that she looked even better than the day she received with Mrs. Lane, when she wore a hands one gown of black lace trimmed with jet handsome gown of black lace trimmed with jet passementerie, one of our gallants (whose bashfulness had passed into a proverb) so far overcome his natural diffidence as to tell her "that she looked beautiful" and was rewarded for his supreme effort by a most gracious smile.

Mr. W. C. Milner has returned looking all the better for his outing. His friends find it pleasant to listen again to his famous "bon mots" which have lost none of their flavor by his tour to the great Northwest. Mrs. Lane was over one day this week on a short visit to her family.

Mr. R. P. Foster, of the Merchants Bank of Halifax, and his bride arrived home on Saturday evening last from their wedding tour. On Sunday she appeared in church in a stylish and becoming dress of navy blue cloth, and toque of black velvet, and this week is receiving. Her dress is of cream silk en train. She is assisted by Miss Ethel Ogden, whose dress is of tawn colored silk bengaline. During her receptions Mrs. Foster has made many friends by her affable and charming manners. She has been ably assisted by Miss Ogden in entertaining the very large number who have called upon

We scarcely realize the cheering influence of the We scarcely realize the cheering influence of the society of pleasant people in a community, until we are deprived of it, then it comes to us how much we depend upon them by the great void felt in social circles because of their being "laid aside" by illness or from some other cause. Who does not long for the return of Mrs. Milner, who for so many years has made her home one of generous hospitality! While if we call at "Brookside" we greatly miss the absence from it of Mrs. Allison, who for equally as long a period could generally be found there, and ready to welcome young and old with her affectionate manner and lovely smile.

I overheard a lady of Dorchester, while visiting n town lately, remark on the very large number of old and middle-aged gentlemen present at the McQueen-Chapman wedding. This reflection is easily ascounted for by the fact of there being an unusual percentage of the former resident there, as well as by the personal popularity and public position of the groom's father, the high sheriff of the county.

Oct. 14.—One of the most brilliant weddings Dorchester has seen for some time took place last seems settling down on them as if the astounding | Wednesday afternoon at half past four, on one of the lovliest days that one could imagine. The times when they were no longer "Lords of Crea- church was decorated with flowers and autumn leaves, while just beneath the chancel arch hung a beautiful bell of pink roses and moss. The groom, Mr. Jos. A. McQueen, and his best man, Dr. Mc-Queen, came from the vestry to the chancel steps home," but if on very intimate terms a few moments just at the hour named, while the choir sang "The voice that breathed o'er Eden." He was joined a few minutes later by the bridal party. The two ushers, Mr. A. J. Chapman, brother of the bride, and Mr. Thos. Murray of Sackville, led the procession, followed by the two bridesmaids, Miss Etta Chapman and Miss Weeks of Charlottetown. The bride followed, leaning upon the arm of her brother, Mr. Clarence Chapman, who gave her away. She was attired in a very handsome gown of white bengaline with valenciennes lace and white ostrich feather trimming, and the usual orange blossoms and veil, and carried a bouquet of white roses. Miss Etta Chapman wore white satin merveilleux, trimmed with silver passementerie, white silk toque with velvet and ostrich tips, bouquet of cream roses. The second bridesmaid wore old rose bengaline and chiffon with toque to match, silver girdle and bouquet of cream roses. After the solumn service was said by Rev. J. Roy Campbell, the wedding party returned to the home of the bride, while wedding march was played by Prof. Barnaby, of Amherst, and the bell rang merrily. The guests were not very numerous, only relatives of the young couple and a few iptimate friends being included.

After delicious refreshments, with the usual toasts and speeches, the bride assumed her travelling dress, a very pretty one of brown, with long cloak, and small felt hat trimmed with birds and velvet; Mr. and Mrs. McQueen took the 7.30 C. P. R. for Montreal, whence they will go to Niagara and other cities. A large number of friends gathered at the station to bid them farewell, and they went away, followed by the good wishes of all. Oct. 14.—The unusually changeable weather of the past month has had the unpleasant result of developing slow fever at a time of year when we were congratulating ourselves that all danger of our annual visitation had passed, and that Jack Frost had devoured every incipient fever microbe almost before it had time to materialize, much less get in its deadly work amongst our membranes and tissues. But the unusual heat of the early part of the month, the heavy rains and sudden frosts, have proved too much for poor humanity and the microbe having laughed last, has naturally laughed best. Amongst the victims have been Mrs. Croasdale, Mrs. George C. Peters, and Mrs. R. W. Hewson. I am glad to say that it is a very mild type of fever, slow in every sense, and tedious, but not at all dangerous. Mrs. Peters has probably had the most severe attack of the three, but she is now mending rapidly. Mrs. George Chandler, of Dorchester came up last week to nurse her daughter, Mrs. Hewson, who is improving rapidly under her care, and will soon be quite herself again.

Mrs. David Dickson and Mrs. W. F. Newman, returned on Saturday from Charlottetown, where they had been spending a few days visiting friends and taking in the exhibition. Indeed a large number of Moncton folks did likewise, amongst them Dr. and Mrs. J. D. Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Hilson, Mr. E. C. Cole, Mr. George Hobb, Mr. George McSweeney, Mr. George C. Matthews and others.

We intend having an exhibition of our own to morrow, and we are going to hold it on the Athletic grounds. I suppose it will be al fresco entertainment altogether, as, beyond the grand stand, I do not know of any building whatever on the grounds. If one may judge by the indications to-day, there is every prospect of that same Moncton and Coverdale Agricultural exhibition developing into an aquatic display since the rain is coming down in sheets this morning that the same of the sam ing, and the grounds have already been under water more than once this autumn. Seriously, it will be a bad thing for the exhibitors if the wet weather should continue. I have heard very little about the masquerade, which was to have been one of the features of the entertainment, and I am be-ginning to wonder if it can possibly have fallen

Mr. Simpson will be greatly missed by his Moneton friends, who will doubtless pray for the speedy completion of the work.

Oct. 14.—This has been an unusually quiet week. There really has not been one thing in the way of entertainment or amusement. If some one would only take pity upon the dull state of society and give a party of some sort, but fall shopping and sewing and that nuisance house cleaning seem to take the time and fill the minds of the ladies who generally entertain, and consequently there is nothing, absolutely nothing of interest to write.
