

IN MUSICAL CIRCLES.

Nothing of great interest has taken place in the musical way during this week, with the exception of the Children's Concerts in the schoolroom of St. Mary's Church on Monday and Tuesday evenings. Everything had been most carefully rehearsed, and passed off with great eclat, to the evident apprecia-tion of the large audience, present. The greatest credit is due to those who instructed and trained the children, to Miss Ada Macleod, who assisted them children, to Miss Ada Macleod, who assisted them so much by her good accompaniments. I was glad to see that one of our St. John music-ians had sufficient strength of mind to practically enter his protest against the hahit, so rife every-where, of talking and laughing during a pianoforte solo. The gentleman in question was asked to play a solo at a public entertainment. The audience would not pay the slightest attention to his playing, and therefore he, very property, to my mind got would not pay the slightest attention to his playing, and therefore he, very properly, to my mind, got up and left the stage. It is, without doubt, a great evil and one that needs reform.

It is having a very serious effect on the study of the planoforte. People will not give up time and trouble to learning an instrument which is not appreciated; and, if the evil be not remedied, the planoforte will in time become a mere accompany-ing hack, instead of one of the most magnificent solo instruments. We are only human, and we look for appreciation; for though appreciation from others should not be the mainspring of our actions, yet there is no doubt that it is a good and whole-some stimulus and encouragement in hard and some stimulus and cheouragement in and the tedious study. The Musical club meeting this month should be highly interesting. The music is to be all British, including English, Scotch and Irish mel-odies, some of which, I believe, are to be accom-month. They will also play two selections by Eng-month.

month. They will also play two selections by Eng-panied by the same strong sextette which played last lish composers. After all, although German and Italian and French music may be very beautiful, there is something about the old British songs and ballads which goes straight to the heart, and I am cled this class of music is not heing neglected in St. glad this class of music is not being neglected in St. John. TALK OF THE THEATRE.

Since I last wrote you another yule tide has come and gone, and another year has been wound on the reel of the centuries. New Year's day is not a holiday in this state (Massachusetts), but the usual watch night services on the last night of the old year are quite in vogue and were carried out by the various churches and other bodies in the customary manner. The farewells to the old and welcomes to the new were not confined to religious bodies as a number of the clubs held services each after its own manner.

The Boston Press Club, of which band of good fellows your correspondent has the pleasure of being a member, celebrated in a style becoming those of the Fourth pianist, and be is certainly a wonderful performer. The critics went in ecstacies over his playing and he made a sensation here. We will have the only Patti with us ere long, but she will only be heard in concert this season. She has splendid poeple with her, but I do not see the name of Nicolini among them. PROSCENIUM.

Price Webber always comes out right side up when he plays in St. John, but Tuesday night he closed an engagement that surpassed his expectations. He played to big houses and big money, and as the genial Webber is not in the business for fun, although he makes plenty of it on the stage, he is well satisfied with his stay in St. John. He would rather earn $10 at low prices than lose the same amount at high prices, and is not a manager who "stands on his dignity." The first two evenings of this week the company played in the West End, to houses seldom seen there.

While in St. John Webber received a telegram asking him to open the new opera house at Annapolis, and arrangements were made for his appearance there March 1st.

At the performance in City hall, Carleton, Tuesday evening, PROGRESS was the victim of one of Webber's jokes. He had a large tin watch that might have been taken for anything else. "Where did you get it?" asked one of the actors "It's one I got fro.n PROGRESS," said

Webber, and the audience roared. It was generally understood as a joke on PROG-RESS, but Webber in his extreme modesty contends that the watch represented the value of his contributions to this paper. But he is wrong.

Estate, and 1892 was ushered in with due formality and impressive ceremonies. The Press Club, by the way, is making great preparations for its annual benefit, which takes place next month. Details have not as yet been perfected, but, of course, it will be the event of the season. The committee have not any trouble about talent, the difficulty being to choose from the host of volunteers who so willingly came forward on this occasion.

The Tremont Theatre has been at the disposal of Rosina Vokes for the past three weeks, and this favorite little woman has been seen in her repertoire. What a delightfully bright, clever actress she is. It may be truly said of her as of Egypt's Queen, "Age cannot wither nor custom stale her infinite variety." Time seems to stand still with her, and she is the same charming artist she was when I first saw her, now many great suns past. This week, at this house, has seen the divine Sarah, the great Bernhardt, and certainly her audiences have had no reason to complain of lack of variety, for she has produced seven plays, one for each of her appearances this week. What an actress she is! Words fail in describing her, and it remains only to say, it is Bernhardt !

The Columbia has started on a six weeks' run of the Lost Paradise, a play which has seen 100 performances in New York, and which has rather hit the popular fancy here. It tells the old story of the struggle between capital and labor. Miss Mary Hampton is in the cast, and is doing conscientious work in her part.

The Globe has given us a gigantic spectacular performance of Sinbad, which is replete with mechanical effects, beautiful scenery and pretty girls principally attired in sweet smiles and fleshings, but it draws, and the managerial heart is light and happy.

Across the way Neil Burgess, at the Park, nightly has the mortgage raised by the efforts of her race horse Cold Molasses, and even the nineteenth week of the Connty Fair shows no diminution in the size of the audiences.

Farther along Washington street, the big Boston, on whose boards we have just in burnt cork hold high jinks, is making great preparations for the production of which is underlined for Monday next.

The Museum has been giving its customary revival of the old comedies, and this week has seen Masks and Faces, School for Scandal and Caste. It is needless to remark that the plays received the acting and setting they deserved.

At the Hollis street theatre farce comedy seems to have charge as one called A Knotty Affair was put on this week and next week we have the promise of one called Incog.

Boston's new theatre the Bowdoin Square will be ready about the middle of the year '91 with 51 pupils, and it is ex-to work, and to accomplish this they will commence a "red figure sale," which will last all January. They have marked down all their stock, and say that the prices in red figures are lower than were ever at-tached to clothing before in St. John, for selling purposes. Scovil, Fraser & Co. are one of the most enterprising firms in the city, and the present enlargement is in keeping with the advancement that has been made since Oak Hall was established. Their customers are found all ever the Provinces, and those from outside places who will visit the store about the middle of February have a surprise in store for them, while those both in and out of town who see the figures in red letters are also promised a surprise by the firm.

THEY GROW IN ZANZIBAR.

Something About the Spice Men Get Retween the Acts.

Zanzibar is the principal source of the world's clove supply. Clove culture is carried on there and in the neighboring island of Pemba. The clove tree was recently introduced into the islands, and its cultivation is now their chief industry.

The seeds are planted in long trenches and kept well watered, and in the course of forty days the shoots appear above ground. They are carefully watered and looked after for two years, when they should be about three feet high. Then they are transplanted-about thirty feet apart and well watered until they become rooted. From that time they only require ordinary

In five or six years they come into bearing, when they are of the size of ordinary pear trees, and very shapely. Then the young plantation is a pretty sight. The leaves of various shades of green tinged with red serve to set off the clusters of dull red clove buds.

The limbs of the tree being very brittle, a peculiar four-sided ladder is used. As seen Carmencita swing and sway her fast as the buds are collected, they are lissome form, and where this week artists spread in the sun until they assume a brownish color, when they are put into the store-house ready for market. A tenyear-old plantation should produce twenty pounds of cloves to a tree. Trees of twenty years frequently produce upwards ot one hundred pounds each.

A peculiarity of the clove tree is that every part of it is aromatic, though the greatest strength is in the bud. Beside the buds the stems are gathered, and form an article of commerce, commanding one fifth the price of cloves, and having about the same percentage of strength. To this is due the fact that ground cloves can be purchased in the home market at a lower price than whole cloves.—Old and Young. week. THE SIEGE OF GIBRALTAR.

A Graphic Description of the Attack of the Spanish Forces.

After weeks of incessant but minor cannonading, the grand attack was made on the 13th September, 1782, when the floatting batteries, umder Buenoventura de Moreno, a distinguished Spanish officer, were in unison with the guns of the ships and shore batteries; and at a quarter to ten the firing began on all sides, exhibiting a scene of which neither pen nor pencil can give the slightest idea. Suffice it to say say that 400 pieces of the heaviest artillery were thundering at once against Gibraltar, the defenders of which found the floating batteries quite as formidable as they had been represented. The heaviest bombs rolled from their flexible roots, and thirty-two-pound shots failed to make any impression on their hulls They were frequently on fire, but the flames were speedily extinguished. Artillery salvoes more tremendous, if possible, than ever were now directed from Gibraltar; incessant showers of red-hot balls of every calibre, of flaming carcasses, and shells of every species, flew from all quarters; and as the great masts of the stately ships went crashing by the board, and their rigging became cut and torn, the consequent confusion in the fleets gave fresh hope to the garrison.

By evening the ship cannonade began to slacken; rockets, as signals of distress, were seen soaring into the air, while boats were rowed around the disabled men-otwar, in which our artillery must have made the most dreadful havoc, for, during the groans, and cries. and shrieks, came floating upward to the ears of the gar-

By midnight one great battering ship was in flames from stem to stern. The light thus thrown around enabled our artillery to point their guns with the utmost precision, while the giant Rock, with all its grim batteries, was brilliantly illuminated, the ships and floating wreckage in the bay were distinctly visible. From the depressed guns the red-hot globes of iron seemed to streak the air with red lines as they went on their errand of destruction; and by four in the morning six other battering ships were also in flames, adding to the sublimity and terror of the scene.

The magazines began to explode and men were heard shrieking among the flames for pity and assistance; others were seen imploring relief, with gestures of despair.

Of these crews only 400 men (out of 5260) were saved by the humane efforts of the garrison, and chiefly by those of Captain (afterwards Sir Coger) Curtis, of the Royal Navy.—British Battles on Land and building a pan of dirt will show a good color of gold dust. How the gold came to be scattered about is explained by a few old pioneers who lived with General Sutter. One source of loss was by the prevailing process of cleaning the gold of dross and black sand. This was done by brought into the requisite position to act blowing with the mouth or a small hand bellows. Another waste occurred in the bar-room, which was located on the east side of the tort in the basement. It was customary, when a man wanted a drink. to deposit his buckskin sack upon the bar, and, after the liquor was disposed of, the barkeeper walked up to the bag, opened it, and, with his forefinger and thumb, took a liberal pinch of the shining dust. Sometimes the buckskin bags leaked and the careless miner in his perambulations would leave behind him a trail of yellow dust, like a farmer going to mill with his wheat sacks carelessly untied.—San Francisco News.
