JUNE 29 .- The proposed strike of the A. M. band has been the uppermost subject for discussion for the past week, and the town has been concerned for fear the excellent concerts we have enjoyed on Wednesday evenings would suddenly terminate. The considerate and generous town council, however, has averted all prospective difficulty by guaranteeing the stipulated amount.

Mr. J. B. Barnaby, the popular organist in Christ church, who has figured so prominently in our musical circle and society in general, during his agreeable sojourn with us of nearly two years, has decided to accept a more lucrative position in a large church in New York. His many friends are, without doubt, pleased to hear of his good fortune, but cannot resist feeling a little blue over the unexpected announcement of his departure to-morrow (Thursday), the suddenness of which has thrown society into a state of perplexity as regard the most advisable way of shewing their great appreciation in such limited time. The programme for this evening is therefore necessarily

A large dance which was announced for this evening has been postponed to admit of the benefit concert for Mr. Barnaby by his many pupils, which will follow the open air concert by the band. Miss Jessie Russell, of St. John, is the guest of Mrs. Robert Keltie.

The handsome residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. McKay presented a festive seen on Thursday evening last, on the occasion of a parlor concert given by the Young Ladies Guild. The house, which has all that wealth and taste can devise to make it beautiful, was brilliantly illuminated and decorated with pretty plants and cut flowers. The kindness of Mr. and Mrs. McKay in giving their house was dully appreciated by everyone and the spacious parlors were crowded with guests. The programme was shorter than was at first intended as several who had promised to perform were unable at the last to keep their engagements; however several members, notably the recitations by Miss Bertha Burnett and Miss Alice White were so excellent in quality as to make up what was lacking in quantity. Miss Burnett has lately returned from a school of oratory in Boston, and her recitation, "My Mother's Scarf," showed careful study combined with much natural talent. To an encore she gave "Peggy in the Low-backed Car." Miss White looked so pretty and gave her recitation in such a charming manner that she quite took the audience by storm, and it was a genuine disappointment when she failed to respond to the encore given her. Miss Nellie Flewelling and Miss Louisa White, in their quaint old-fashioned costumes, were excellent in a funny dialogue. A pretty, bright piece of instrumental music was given by Miss Lottie Hallett, and several tableaux were well carried out. Another good number was a sunflower song, in which the pretty faces of ten youthful maidens formed charming centres to a group of sunflowers. Ice cream and cake were served during the evening, and a vote of thanks, which was proposed in Judge Wallace's best style, was tendered Mr. and Mrs. McKay for their kind hospitality. It was as successful financially as in other ways, and the sum of about $17.00 was realized, half of which will be devoted to the S. S. library of Trinity church, while
