On Thursday afternoon society deserted the cricket field en masse and repaired to the tennis party at Wellington barracks. The officers of the Leicestershire regiment are capital hosts, and though not a very great deal of tennis was played much tea and talk—a convenient word which in some cases may be read flirtation—took up the afternoon very pleasantly. A great many American ladies were present, dressed for the most part more prettily if more fantastically than it is the habit of Halifax ladies to dress.

Wednesday's downpour postponed the receptiom at the Yacht club until this evening, the only one vacant during the week. It would have been impossible to have a band evening in the rain, as dancing was to have been out of doors on a floor laid down on the quoit ground. Added to which not half the people having tickets could be accommodated in the club house itself.

For the Ottawa eleven, of whom so much was expected, all were disposed of for thirty-five, the worst score yet made by any team. On Thursday, with the perfect day, came a very different record. All Halifax went in and made something over ninety, and after which the Ottawa team ran up a score of a hundred and thirty-six.

The Leicestershire regiment's at home was purposely held late in the afternoon to admit of the cricketers attendance. While the dinner given for them at the Queen hotel was fixed for the sensible hour, in summer, of eight-thirty.

Aug. 3 .- Our ladies are usually far too judicious to take up with fads of any kind, but just now "going to the seashore" seems fast developing into a mania that is very detrimental to society. And I might say if some of the fair subjects who have recently returned from the seashore are perfect types of Neptune's school of beauty, culinary drill at home would be preferable and equally as effective as a beautifier.

I am happy to say that this stirring town won't remain very long in a state of social apathy, as the large fair in connection with Christ church is a settled fact and will take place the first of the coming month. # THE COST OF A FLIRTATION.

An Itemized Bill of Winks, Smiles, Etc., That Had to be Paid.

Did I ever flirt? Well, I should smile unreservedly and often. My wife knows me too well to ask such a question, but at the same time she is aware that I never flirt now-never, oh never! What married man does?

I got myself into innumerable scrapes by flirting, but there was one that was just a little too sensational for even my iron nerve. And no man can possibly flirt without that outfit of moral ore.

I was traveling in the south at the time, and found myself one day at noon stranded near a shabby cabin on the hillside where it seemed impossible for human beings to live, but which gave signs of being inhabited, although the door was close shut. I rapped without dismounting, using the butt of my whip, and the door was opened instantly, and by one of the handsomest girls I ever saw, albiet she wore but a single garment, and that a yellow calico gown scantily made.

I bowed and smiled, my horse curvetted and pranced, and I thought I was making a fine figure as I asked it I could be accommodated with a dinner for mycelf and some water for my horse.

"I reckon yer kin, stranger, seein' ez fayther air willin'." and she looked inquiringly at a lank man who had been peeping over her half-clad shoulder.

"It air yer dicker, Jinnie," he said in a drawling voice. "Light, stranger," she said; "yer can eat corn bread an' bacon I reckon. I told her that I could, and gave her the long look of a professional flirter, to which, rather to my surprise, she replied by winking one eye in a manner so fantastic that had she not been really handsome it would have made her look grotesque.

"So this is to be a game that two can play at," I thought to myself as I followed my hostess into the cabin.

The "father" talked crops, politics and weather in a drawling monosyllabic sort of way, and I watched the daughter and got in some smiles and smirks which were meant to show that I admired her and to which she responded with as much alacrity as a regular city flirt.

While I ate my dinner she waited on me and I managed to say several things that were not intended for the "father's" ears. He did not seem to notice us, or perhaps was quite willing I should admire his pretty daughter. She was a blond, and blonds always made me giddy-headed. You will notice I speak in the past tense-my wife is

While I was eating and flirting I noticed that the lank "father" was busy with the stub of a pencil and a bit of wrapping paper and I concluded from certain glances he cast at me that he was figuring up my dinner fee. This is not characteristic of the hospitable south, for there as well as in other parts avarice, or rather necessity, sometimes prevails. So I asked as 1 rose from the table what the "damage" would be for what I had eaten.

"We don't take no pay for vittles," said Umbrellas and Parasols Repaired; Duval, my pretty hostess, with a musical intonation that quite captivated me.

"No, stranger, I reckon, we kin give ye a bite for nothin', but foh abusin' yer priverlidges an' a trespassin' on other folks' property. heah air yer bill, an' it's all regular made out."

I took the bit of paper in my hand, and this is what I read:

"mr. stranger Detter two seth Sharples for lookin crosside at His Wif 50cts. fer tew dozen larffs in the face of mis Sharples $1. Fer five wunks from Miss sharples. 50cts Totall $2.00

"That don't go down," he said, and began to fool with the trigger. "That settles it," I said, and I paid the two dollars, and with a hard bitter laugh at my folly, I mounted my horse and rode away, the charming Mrs. Sharples looked after me with speculation in her eyes, and it's dollars to cents that that episode cured the Bodies of Eighty-two Victims. The monster was a male leopard, in no respect different from an ordinary leopard in the beauty of its skin and its general appearance, save for its length, 6 feet 6 inches, when it was measured before being divested of its skin, it had an abnormally large head and very powerful shoulders. The skin after being cured measured just a trifle over 7 feet 9 inches. The brute had had a long career of crime, for its first kill, that of a little girl of 4 years, whom it sprang upon and dragged into the jungle from the courtyard of the house or bari where the child was playing about sunset or a little later, was notified by the police of Arani outpost in July, 1870. Many shooting parties were organized for its destruction last year. The sporting Rajah of Nator went twice with his elephants to shoot it. A Mohammedan gentleman also visited the Arani jurisdiction on the same errand. Several European planters living in the tract of country over which the leopard was known to roam were also foiled in the attempt to kill it. The animal took refuge whenever search was made for it, in the sugar cane. Never before-at least in Rajshahi-has a leopard been known to display the same curiosity and daring. There have been tigers that have in different parts of India caused a terrible loss of life; but I doubt whether a leopard has ever been known to kill such a number as 154 human beings in the same space of twenty-one months. It was killed itself on the 6th of April at Madaha, a village four miles distant from Arhab. It killed one victim only on each of

BREAKING HIS SPIRIT. A Terrible Ordeal that Few Prisoners Can

Hold Out Against. For eight days Oliver Curtis Perry has been subjected to the torture of solitude, alone in a dark cell, with no other subsistence than two gills of water and two ounces of bread a day, says an Auburn, New York paper. If these stringent measures do not break the high-spirited youth it will be the first time they have failed. The man would have made an ugly prisoner to deal with, and the prison officials only awaited some outbreak on his part to apply the methods which are certain to bring him to submission. The infringement of the rules occurred Friday, July 8, when Perry was put to work in the collar shop. He rebelled at the labor and was promptly arrested. He would have been punished severely enough for that act, but the unlucky prisoner called down upon his head still further condemnation by refusing to go quietly to the dungeon, and the punishment was consequently increased. To obtain some idea of the terrible ordeal which the prisoner in the dungeon has to undergo, it is only necessary to know that after the third day the man loses all appetite for the morsel of bread which is given him as his day's rations. He looks with loathing upon the only means of keeping life within his body, and prefers to starve rather than eat it. He wastes away in flesh and strength, until the most vicious thug becomes as manageable as a kitten. Upon his release the tear of future punishment of a similar nature prompts him to obey the rules of the prison to the letter. It is scarcely probable that he will be able to resume work immediately after his release, but he manifests the most earnest desire to work to the best of his ability as soon as he shall have recovered his lost strength. Some of those whom it is necessary to break in spirit by these means are occasionally irremediably broken down in health. Sometimes it happens that the man is carried from the dungeon to the hospital, and his journey from there to the Potter's field, in Fitth avenue, is sure and switt Many are the assaults which are happening weekly in the various shops of the prison, and for which the prisoners receive sentences to the dungeon for greater or lesser periods. Phthisis pulmonalis is the favorite malady announced in the death certificate of these unfortunates who are carted out of the dismal walls to their last resting place. Starvation has never been assigned as a reason, but the emaciated frame and condition of the sufferer might be mistaken for consumption.

His Mistake.

He knocked at the kitchen door timidly and asked for something to eat. "You can have it it you'll saw some wood for me," said the lady.

"I shall only be too happy," he responded, "but I must ask that you give me something to eat first, for I am weak from hun-She had her doubts about a bargain of that kind, but took him in and set him down before a large slice of lett-over steak. He attacked it at once with knite and implements of war. "You will excuse me, I hope," he said
