In the evening the centre of attraction was the promenade concert in the rink. The rain, which began to descend in torrents, could not damp the ardor of the merry crowd within the beautifully festooned rink, which was quite sylvan in its appear-ance. JULY 6 .- The only attraction here on Dominion Day was the camp, but that proved sufficient to bring a large picnic from St. Peter's church, St. John, besides a number of visitors from different places. The streets were thronged with these strangers, and a large number visited the camp grounds during the day. A review of the troops grounds during the day. A review of the troops took place in the afternoon, the most exciting and totally unforseen event at which was the tricks of Capt. Hemming's horse, a vicious brute, that threw him twice, but not before he had shown that he was a plucky as well as a good horseman. For-tunately he was not injured, and at the last rode the horse quietly off the grounds. A heavy shower came up before the review was quite over and visitors and troops alike had to seek shelter. visitors and troops alike had to seek shelter. It was a pretty sight on Sunday when all the troops were drawn up on church parade. They marched out with the bands playing, and took up a position near some spreading willows near the centre of the field. A hollow square was formed in which the clergyman, the Rev. H. W. Little, officiated with two drums for a pulpit. The I. S. C. band played during service, and the choir of Trinity church was in attendance. Almost before the service was finished the rain began and again everyone had to hurry home. So much wet weather thus far during camp has been most unfortunate, but the last two days have been days of glorious summer weather, days have been days of glorious summer weather, which, we hope, will continue.

The one last evening was especially fine and a vote of thanks is due Mr. MacDonnell who started it soon thanks is due Mr. MacDonnell who started it soon after the band finished playing retreat. In a short time a large crowd gathered and the scene became animated and picturesque. A pale moon shone dimly through a misty veil of clouds while the grand old trees that stood round about like soleum sentine is threw their dark and wierd branches across the sky. In the foreground a rosy and vivid spot of color was made by the fire, which was built a hollow stump some ten or twelve feet high The flame played up in a long column from the top of this and threw its circle of light, with the flicker-ing shadows, far and wide over the eager, upturned of this and threw its circle of light, with the lickor-ing shadows, far and wide over the eager, upturned faces and bright uniforms of the groups collected around it, and on the near branches of the trees. Choruses, duetts and solos were the order of the evening. An excellent recitation, "The Union Jack" was given by Mr. Burns, and was followed by "Rule Britannia" in chorus. Mr. Custance was, without doubt, the favorite of the evening, and his Irish songs, of which he gave several, were particularly taking. So then they decided to hold it again on Saturday and were fortunate enough to have a fine day. The cavalry band was present and played during the evening.
