GAGETOWN.

JULY 20 .- The great event of the season is over. Gagetown's centennial thas been celebrated, and now all the towns people are congratulating each other over the fact that the whole affair was a great success. The steamer Florenceville, from Fredericton, arrived at 11 o'clock, and the visitors were able to attend service in the church which was beautifully decorated with ferns and daisies. Rev. Mr. Parkinson, of St. Mary's preached an eloquent sermon. The St. John loyalists arrived some few minutes before church was out, which made it awkward for devout persons, who also wished to see the May Queen arrive. Although both excursion boats left in the afternoon there was a large attendance at the conversazione in the evening. Mr. De Veber Neales as chairman announced an excellent programme of music, vocal and instrumenta, and Rev. W.O. Ray mond and Rev. Mr. Parkinso made a few remarks. mond and Rev. MONCTON.

[PROGRESS is for sale in Moncton at the book-store of W. H. Murray, Main street, and on the streets by J. E. McCoy.] JULY 20 .- "Everybody go to the Rocks" seems to be the motto of the great majority of Moncton people this summer, and almost every day some pleasure party embarks on the new river steamer, Evangeline, and sets gaily forth for a cruise upon the chocolate-colored bosom of our own, and only Petitcodiac. I scarcely know whether the added popularity of this delightful retreat is owing to the increased accommodation of the new steamer the growing fame of the "Rocks" as a place everyone should see, or the absence of any other form of amusement, but the fact remains that all other forms of amusement seem to be at a discount in Moncton, even tennis balls and the "bran new" club with its lovely private grounds and its pretty, suggestive name seems to lanquish now that the bloom of novelty has been slightly brushed off, and even the gilded bait of a tennis tea every Saturday afternoon fails to draw a crowd of anything like cheering proportions. Of course there are a great many people away, which may account in some measure for the lassitude which seems to hamper the movements of the club, and things may improve with the approach of cold weather.

Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Harris returned last week from a three weeks trip through the United States.

HALIFAX.

The South End Lawn Tennis club could not have fixed upon a better day for their tournament. The weather was delightful and there were absolutely no other attractions for the idle world on a holiday. There were some very pretty frocks to be seen, not among the players so much as the spectators. White cordury, pale pink crepe, old rose crepon, fine blue and white striped foulard formed some of the smartest gowns to be seen. And nearly every dress one met was trimmed somewhere with lace, usually followed by a dance. A series of these small functions are being given at Bellevue, so that people may be asked in rotation. Curiously enough, though Bellevue is so pleasant a house to go to, it is not one in which ladies are apt to look their best; the electric light is arranged in a trying, if very pretty and effective manner; and even the complexons, for which some of our Halifax ladies are celebrated, look pale under its searching radiance. Unfortunately, there is no other possible method of adequately lighting so long a room. Last night's dance was an especially pleasant one however, and was kept up to an unusually late hour for so small an entertainment. Captain and Mrs. Trotman have a sister and Kenny's, among the guests at which were Sir John Ross and Mr. White, A.D.C., who went on with several others to Gorsebrook where Mrs. Robie Uniacke was giving a "small and early" dance. Gorsebrook is a house eminently suited for such small functions, as the rooms though numerous are not very large. The floor was especially good, and the whole affair most cheery and suc-cessful. OLD TIMES IN HAWAII. The Absolute Power of the King and the People's Fear of the Priests.

On Friday evening Sir John Rose had a dinner,

Reverence for royalty was one of the most marked characteristics of the ancient religion of the Hawaiians. It was formerly a crime punishable with death to pass through the king's shadow, or sit higher than his head. His person was sacred, and protected by a strict system of taboo. In the royal palace the taboo stick, with which the king announced his excommunications, is exhibited. It is a wand with a carved stone cap. If this stick was lowered on the approach of a courtier he was compelled to withdraw immediately, was recognized as being in disgrace. The king's will was absolute; but the majority of the Hawaiian monarchs seem to have been of a kindly disposition, and to have made no improper use of their extreme power. It was due to one of them that the tamboo system was abolished. This system bore with grevious weight upon the women. They were forbidden the use of some of the most common articles of diet, such as bananas and certain kinds of fish, on the pain of death. It was taboo for a woman to enter the eating house of the men, or one of the "helaus" or temples. Before the arrival of the first missionaries the reigning king, out of consideration for some of his women, declared the taboo abolished.

The work of converting the natives to christianity was greatly assisted by this voluntary renunciation of the old heathen system. The power of the priests was broken by it, though their influence was still strong with the natives. The source of the awe in which they were held is easily understood, when one considers that they were formerly invested with the right of choosing the victims for the human sacrifices. Later they depended largely on the "anana," or power of praying people to death, to retain their influence. No amount of argument can disabuse the native mind of a belief in this particular kind of enchantment. It is not the priests alone who practise it. It is believed that any one can compass the decise of will power. In fact, so stong is the popular conviction on the subject, or so weak the vitality of the state of th struction of an enemy by a sufficient exercise of will power. In fact, so stong is the weak the vitality of the race, that it is sometimes sufficient merely to convince a man that some one has determined to pray him to death.

An instance is related by one of the early missionaries of a man who became thus convinced, and set the day and hour of his own death. Mr. Armstrong was resolved that the man should not die. He accordingly procured a sufficient amount of chloroform, and kept him unsconscious until the fatal hour was past. His astonishment on being roused was boundless, but the bold ruse saved his life. - Overland Monthly.

A Naturalist's Fleas. A naturalist, who is both an ardent student in his branch of science and absent minded to a degree which keeps his family on the alert, recently celebrated his silver wedding. Many guests were invited for the occasion and the house was made ready for the reception of the company.

Just as the first guest arrived one of the daughters was sent to summon the father, who had not come from his study. Care had been taken that he should be reminded to dress in time, so he was all ready, and ter noticed that her father carried in his hand a small wooden box, and as he shook hands with the nearest guest she saw him drop it. The cover rolled off, but she gave a sigh of relief when she saw that the box was apparently empty. The naturalist, however, uttered a cry of dismay, and instantly went down on his hands and knees in an attempt to gather up

"Have you spilled anything, father?"

she asked. "Spilled anything!" he echoed, in evident indignation at her calm tone. "I have lost fifty fleas that I have just received from Egypt! The effect of this intelligence on the family was nothing in comparison to the effect the catastrophe had upon the company before the evening was over, and the only thing that the naturalist said to his friends in answer to their congratulations upon his happy married life, so his daughters declared after all was over, was to ask that if they carred away any of his Egyptian fleas they would return the insects to him!—Chicago Journal.
