HALIFAX.

Oct. 20 .- One of the pleasantest dances ever given at Wellington barracks was that of Wednesday when the officers of the Leicestershire regimen were at home. Wellington barracks, owing to its peculiar architecture, is a difficult place to do up, but the hosts had certainly succeeded in making the dingy old place a perfect bower of beauty. Dancing was in the large mess-room, the floors of which is very good. The decorations were very handsome and one could not help noticing a most magnificent tiger skin on one of the walls. Supper was up stairs in the billiard room. The table was very pretty, being chiefly done with autumn leaves. Although there were a great many guests, still there was no actual crush at any time, except in the ante-room. Most of the dresses had figured before, many of them at the recent ball at Government

A Curtain Man Who Incurred the Dis pleasure of Sarah Bernhardt.

On the first performance by Sarah Bernhardt of Sardou's "Cleopatra" in this city the curtain man was observed to be in a state of extraordinary agitation, says a N Y. paper. Nothing was particularly thought of it at the time, as every one was more or less excited behind the scenes.

The great French woman had rehearsed the drama until both she and her company were in a condition of high nervous tension. The curtain man's evident mental disturbance was therefore easily accounted for in the general concern of the event. But if any one had known the anxiety then torturing this troubled soul there would have been a riot in the theatre.

It subsequently transpired that the curtain director was a person of high moral principles. He was a modest married man with a family, a man who went to church and eschewed the devil, a man of decorous conduct and ideas, He upheld the drama as a moral preceptor of great benefit to the public, but he sternly disapproved of any looseness of language or action on the stage that might bring harm to the community. He had heard rumors that Sarah's Bernhardt's life was actuated by a system of the moralities not exactly puritanic. But although he could not actively condemn her appearance on the stage he could and would interfere to prevent a movement which had grieved him in the rehearsal and which he was determined should not shock the spectators in the perform-

The drama went smoothly until the final act was reached. In that scene Cleopatra, as is well known, applies a serpent to her breast and presently expires. Mme. Bernhardt is famous for the realism of her death episodes. Rumor in Paris has it that a a Persian magistrate poisoned one of his slaves by a snake bite in order to let the divine Sarah study the effects of sudden dissolution under circumstances similar to those that terminated the history of the Egyptian queen. It is certain that on this occasion a great many folks in the auditorium awaited with curious anticipation the shuffling off of Cleopatra. Sarah Bernhardt was equally interested and intent.

She prepared to die with infinite and appalling detail. Taking a jeweled asp from so terrible that, although he didn't know the language, the unfortunate man immediately fainted among the gas pipes. A substitute of less squeamish propriety was put in his place. The curtain went up and Cleopatra did as well as she could under aggravating conditions. The climax, however, was spoilt, and they say that as Mme.

Bernhardt drove down to her hotel that night her carriage was followed by a wraith

Ideal Men and Women are Scarce.

The ideal woman of every man is th "womanly woman." The ideal man of every woman is the "manly man." And the expression a womanly woman means pretty much the same to every man who uses it, according to Harper's Bazar, just as the manly man of one woman expresses a certain combination of qualities well known to every other woman. The man's womanly woman is gentle, amiable, quiet and domestic. She loves to sit upon a low chair and hem things, with the lamp light falling over her hair. It is unnecessary to say that although in theory this is the sort o woman a man prefers, in practice he may choose one entirely her opposite. Sh does not exist in large quantities, which is lucky, as she might prove dreadfully in-sipid if she did. The woman's manly man means a man strong, brave, and daring. He must perform easily bold deeds which she dare not attempt. She likes that-in dreams. In actual life she may find that a man neither daring nor bold has satisfactory and endearing qualities which make him more after her heart than the ideal of her dreams could even be. We Distance Travelled in Dancing.

An average waltz takes a dancer over about three quarters of a mile. A square dance makes him cover half a mile. A girl with a well filled programme travels thus in one evening: Twelve waltzes, nine miles; four other dances at half a mile apiece, which is hardly a fairly big estimate, two miles more; the intermission stroll and the trips to the dressing room to renovate her gown and complexion, half a mile; grand total. eleven and a halt miles.

There is beauty in the lightning gleam
