Mrs. Willoughby Anderson had a young people ' dance on Monday evening at her pretty cottage on the Arm, which was one of the pleasantest little affairs possible. The evening was very fine if a little cold, and the moonlight upon the garden and the water beyond, made a scene to be remembered. The dance was not a very large one, but the decorations of the rook were very pretty, and the supper, of course, excellent. The very young lady who was quite the belle of the evening looked ex-tremely pretty in a simple white frock. The coming generation of young girls indeed bids fair to outshine the present one in looks. * * *

On Monday afternoon Mrs. Stairs-Duffus had an informal tea, her farewell "at home" day in her present house. Although there were no invitations there were a goodly number of people gathered to-gether on the occasion. Mrs. Duffus's Monday afternoon has been a popular institution ever since her coming to Halifax some years ago, and her pleasant little drawingroom will be much missed during the coming winter by the intimate, though not small circle which has been accustomed to frequent it toward 5 o'clock on a Monday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Duffus, however, in removing to Dartmouth will not lose their Halifax friends, as Northbrook, their future residence, is not more than a mile from the ferry, just a pleasant walk at this time of year.

Mrs. Guy Hait was at home to her friends on Mrs. Guy Hait was at home to her friends on Monday and Tuesday afternoons on her return from her wedding journey, and Morris street had taken on quite its winter aspect on the first day with all the world and his wife going to and fro on it. Mrs. Hart is installed in the pleasant rooms which were last year occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Dalziel, and are both large and cheery. She was very smartly dressed in pink and green—a combination largely affected by the way, by the trides of this year— trimmed very plentitully with lace, and was assist-ed by her sister. Mrs. Curry, whose more sombre ed by her sister, Mrs. Curry, whose more sombre toilette made a capital contrast with that worn by the bride herself.

Every one who attended the Wanderers' Fair and heard the Leicestershire band play the Wanderers' march is delighted to hear that the composer has published it. It will make a capital march for skating and it is to be hoped we shall hear it as the opening selection at the rink this winter. It has a swing and go which makes it a capital thing for the purpose. * * *

I hear that the officers of the Leicestershire regi ment, who have done so much in the way of entertaining in the course of their stay here, intend giving a small dance during this month. This is altogether an excellent piece of news for society, as the regi-ment in question are the best possible hosts who can go to no trouble too great where the comfort of their guests is requested. Wellington barracks is a capital place for an

Wellington barracks is a capital place for an autumn dance, as big fires can be made in all the sitting out rooms, so that non dancing people and chaperones are as well off as the more energetic. No Halifax dance, however, could very well be an improvement on the one given last night at govern-ment house. In every way if was a theorem.

Oct. 4 .- The fair and garden party spoken of in last week's notes passed of successfully on Thursday afternoon and evening, although the weather was rather autumn like for out door entertainment, and in consequence the garden party was more like a fancy tazaar, the whole of the ground floor of the rectory being thrown open for that purpose. A sale of fancy articles held in the conservatory was well patronized and the amount realized was creditable to the work of the young girls in charge. Tea was served in one of the parlors, and considering the reasonable charge, was very good; the half or dozen or more young people in charge were kept busy, or more young people in charge were kept busy, especially between the hours of six and eight. Dur-ing the evening excellent music was furnished by Mr. Allison, organist of Holv Trinity church and Mr. Metcalf, violin. The effect of the well lighted rooms and conservatory with its bright lanterns was very pretty, particularly from the outside. Aside from the bazaar, a very sociable evening was spent, Dr. Cartwright proving a genial and enter-taning host. Financially also the whole affair was successful. successful

There were not, I faney, more than two hundred and fifty guests, but any amount of room had been utilized tor sitting out, cards and smok ng. Dancing, of course, was in the large ball-room, tea and ices in the dining-room, and supper upstairs. The sitting out rooms were very prettily arranged and decorated with quantities of palms, autumn leaves and flowers, and lit with shaded lamps in the most becoming and effective way. The floor was very good, and the music excellent; there was at no time too great a crowd, and dancing went on without the uncomfortable incidents of scratched arms and torn dresses. There was a great number of fresh frocks and pretty dresses to be seen. Mrs. Daly herself was very handsomely dressed and was looking especially handsome. Miss Daly in a very pretty gown of her invariable color was also looking quite her best. There were any amount of men, soldiers, sailors,

There were any amount of men, soldiers, sailors, civilians and the militia men, who are a combination of the first and last. The varied uniforms made the ball-room an exceedingly pretty sight, mingled with the pale and brilliant dresses worn by the ladies, and relieved against the banks of mosses and flow ers which replaced the mantelpieces and were reected in the tall mirrors. The supper table was one of the prettiest bits of decoration of the evening, even the youngest debu-tante who "never cats supper" had to admit that the flowers and silver, the glasses and china, made the table a joy to the eye. * * * There have been some very pleasant teas this week at various houses, one of the pleasantest of which was given on Wednesday afternoon with not too many people at it to be cheery and sociable. Col. and Mrs. Nugent will be missed at musical teas just now, as Mrs. Nugent's singing was distinctly above the average and much on demand. Mrs. Nugent was always very kind about singing, and she and her husband who left for Bermuda this week will be sincerely regretted. Dr and Mrs. May, of Washington, also left on Tuesday for Washington, D. C.

The very sudden death of Mr. Joseph Belcher, who was thrown out of his carriage on Saturday last, has cast a gloom over a large portion of the community. Mr. Belcher, during his life time, did a great deal of useful and untiring work for the methodist church in Halifax of which he was a devoted member, and leaves a lasting monument behind him in the little church at the corner of Robie street and Coburg road, in the erection of Robie street and Coburg road, in the erection of which he was largely instrumental. Mrs. Belcher has the sympathy of every one in her sad and irre-parable loss. One of her daughters is, I understand, in Chicago, but the younger one is in Hali-fax, and was driving with her father when the accident occurred which ended so fatally.

Regarding the smoking of cigarettes by ladies a Regarding the smoking of cigarettes by ladies a correspondent sends me this week a clipping from an English paper devoted to dress and gossip, the statement in which I take the liberty to disbelieve. It certainly does not apply to our Halifax dames, nor, as far as I know, to any others, but I give it as my correspondent requested. "To show that smok-ing is becoming fashionable among the ladies, ing is becoming fashionable among the ladies, smoking-gowns are the latest addition to the ward-tobe of the popular woman who is beloved by her fellow-man. They are of the rich warm brown of the tobacco itself, or of the faint grey blue of the rings and clouds of smoke. They are of softly clinging and noiseless fabrics, frilled with yellow lace, which only deepen their tint in the smoke-laden atmosphere, and the woman of the period is as proud of a well, perfumed smoking gown as is a man proud of a well-perfumed smoking gown as is a man of a well-colored meerschaum."
