Three hundred millions of eggs are used every year in the United States in making albumen paper, used in photography.

Alaska seal skins, shipped since the territory came under the American flag, are valued at thirty-three millions of dollars.

The largest needle manufactory in the world is in Redditch, Worcestershire, England. Over seventy millions are made weekly.

The production of soap in England is about 45,000 tons per week, of which between 3000 and 4000 tons are made in London.

A depth of two thousand, four hundred and sixty fathoms has been lately found in the Mediterranean, the greatest yet known in the sea.

The ideal draft horse should be able to go a mile in nine minutes, with a light load, and haul 6000 pounds up a grade of ten inches to the rod for 40 rods.

Boston was incorporated as a city in 1822. Its population in 1800 was 24,937; in 1820, 43,298; in 1830, 61,391; in 1840, 93,383; in 1850, 136,881; and in 1860, 177,840.

The 3745 industries considered in the report of the Massachusetts State Bureau of Statistics represent an invest capital of $434,655,302, an increase during the year of $9,332,490.

As a capital test for sewer gas, employ unglazed paper saturated with a solution of one ounce of pure acetate of lead in half a pint of rain water. After partial drying, expose in the room. Sewer gas in any amount will darken or blacken the paper.

Volcanic ashes often travel a long distance. A remarkable shower of volcanic ashes has occurred recently in several parts of Finland. The ground in some places has been covered to the depth of nearly an inch. The phenomenon is attributed to volcanic eruptions in Iceland, hundreds of miles away.

Statistics from the British census show that the Irish language is dying out. Ten years ago 64,000 people in Ireland spoke only Irish. In 1891 the number who knew only the Irish tongue was 38,000. In 1881, 885,000 of the population of Ireland could speak Irish and English. Last year the number was 642,000.

Some one has estimated that twenty-two acres of land is needed to sustain a man on flesh, while that amount of land sown to wheat will feed forty-two persons; sowed to oats, eighty-eight; to potatoes, Indian corn and rice, one hundred and seventy-six persons, and planted with the bread-fruits tree, over six thousand people could be fed.

Emperor Alexander has freed the Kalmucks of Astrakhan from serfdom. These roving people are Buddhists, and they number 150,000 souls. When the other Russian serfs were freed, in 1861, the Kalmucks were not permitted to enjoy the results of that reformation, for it was thought that so wild a people would abuse their privileges.

A good prescription for cholera morbus is a tumblerful of water, to which has been added a teaspoonful of raw cornstarch, and a teaspoonful or two of common table salt. These are stirred well together and as much is drunk as can be taken without nausea. This has been tried many times in cases of summer diarrhoea and cholera morbus, with invariable and prompt success.

Notes and Queries say that "as dead as a door nail" is well known to be one of the oldest similes in the language. It occurs not only in Shakespeare ("2 Henry IV," V. iii. 125), but in England's "Piers the Ploughman" (about 1362-1399), who says that "feith withoute fet [feet]" is "ded as a dore-nayle" (C. ii. 184). Prof. Skeat, in a note on this passage in his monumental edition of the poem (Vol. II, p. 29), observes that an earlier use still is to be found in "William of Palerne" (about 1350). The passage referred to is: "I am ded as a dore-nail."

You often see it "St. John, ss." It is to be found at the beginning of acknowledgements and other legal documents, but not one in a dozen can tell you what that cabalistic "ss." is for. To be short and to the point, the abbreviation is a contraction of the Latin word "scilicet," which is also a contraction, having originally been written as "scire licet," neither of which, you will note, has more than one "s." The word entire, or in its abbreviated state, is equivalent to the old English "to wit," still widely used, the design of both being simply to call particular attention to what follows.

In a lately published glossary of Anglo-Indian colloquial words, are found such phrases as "Just the cheese," derived from chiz, meaning "thing"; also, "Don't care a damn," derived from dam, a small copper coin, and equivalent for a "brass farthing." "Candy" sugar comes from khand, and means "broken" sugar. "Chicane" and "chicanery" are derived through French usage, from chaguan, horse-golf, or what we call polo, a game which has reached us for the second time since it was imported into Europe from the East before the Middle Ages. Demijohn is not from French demijohn, but the town of Dannaghon, in Persia. Turban is a corruption of durband, a Persian word for a head wrap.

MEN AND WOMEN TALKED ABOUT.

Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote the "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" at 48.

The Duke of Edinburgh is composing music to a libretto by Carmen Sylva.

London photographers cannot meet the demand for pictures of our Buffalo Bill.

"That holy terror, Sam Jones," is what the prohibition revivalist styles himself on the placards.

Miss Willard estimates four thousand vocations open to women, and there were but thirty-six in 1876.

Emperor William and Bismarck have each expressed themselves as of half a mind to come to the World's Fair.

The Queen has granted a pension of £50 per annum to Mrs. Casel Hoey as a recognition of her merits as an author.

Sarah Bernhardt had to substitute Camille for Cleopatra at Lille because the costumes for the latter had to be fumigated.

Herbert Spencer, the philosopher, is said to be a man of singular modesty, "with a gentle voice and almost feminine grace."

Queen Victoria has promised specimens of her work in spinning and knitting, done when she was a girl, for the World's Fair.

Queen Christina, of Spain, is using her influence against bull fighting. She has been in the royal box of the arena but once since the death of her husband.

When Lord Tennyson is asked to read his works aloud he almost invariably selects the "Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington" and after that "Maud."

Mrs. Hattie Brooks, of Maine, has charge of an extensive foundry and locomotive shop near Dunkirk, New York. The establishment turns out a locomotive a day.

It has been decided that the duties of mistress of the robes to Queen Victoria shall be performed by the Dowager Duchess of Athlone and the Dowager Duchess of Roxburgh.

Mme. Christine Nilsson's hobby is the collection of fans. She possesses several curious and beautiful ones. Some of these fans belonged to ladies famous in history and in the world of art.

Princess Frederick Karl, aunt of the German Emperor, has accepted the presidency of the woman's commission in Germany, and will co-operate with the board of managers for the World's Fair.

General Obrucheff, the newly appointed commander of the Russian armies, is so stout that he cannot sit in a saddle, nor is it likely, if he could do so, that there is anywhere a horse strong enough to bear his weight.

Thomas Cook, of London, the founder of excursion trains, who recently died, conceived the great idea while walking fifteen miles to a temperance meeting. The first railroad excursion was made in 1841, with five hundred and seventy passengers.

Martha Foote Crow has been recalled from Oxford to fill a chair in the department of English literature in Chicago university. Mrs. Crow is one of the three women included among the lecturers of the university's extensive summer meeting at Oxford, her theme being "Women's Colleges in America."

Sir Edwin Arnold is an optimist in most things, and he includes in his optimistic regard not only Japan but the United States. To a young friend who announced to him a project for entering upon a new business venture, Sir Edwin enthusiastically exclaimed: "I'm glad to hear it. Go ahead, my dear boy. You'll succeed; of course you'll succeed. You'll make money; everybody makes money in this wonderful country."

The Duke of Sutherland was an enthusiast over the American fire department system, and when features of it were adopted by Captain Shaw of the Metropolitan fire brigade in London, the Duke had his residence, Stafford House, telegraphically connected with the headquarters. He also kept in his dressing-room the gleaming helmet, axe, belt and all the minutiae of the fireman's costume. Over 20 years ago he and the Prince of Wales were always among the first to arrive at the scene of a great conflagration.

When in October of last year Capt. Fraser of Banning, Montana, died he left an extensive estate, consisting of hundreds of acres of hay and grain, orchards and vineyards, and a large hotel. His wife, a quiet and modest woman, is now carrying on the business entirely by herself, spending days in the saddle from 6 in the morning until 7 at night without dismounting, except for lunch, overseeing the Indian laborers who do the work of the vast estate, and, half an hour later, changing her habit for an evening gown, she entertains her guests in the hotel parlors through the evening as gracefully as if she for her meant only the ordering and wearing of Paris gowns and bonnets.

They tell a story of the poet Whittier illustrating his modesty which almost amounted to a thorough self-depreciation. A gentleman sojourning in a certain Eastern summer resort in the course of his rambles came across an elderly, sweet tempered old man, who was withal quite genial. As they walked along nothing seemingly escaped the eye of the old gentleman, who plucked the wayside flowers and remarked repeatedly, "How beautiful!" He said that so often that his companion was about to put him down as an agreeable old crank or "Nancy," but when they reached the hotel he asked the hotel clerk out of curiosity, "Who is that old gentleman?" "That, sir, is John Greenleaf Whittier."

Mme. Munkacsy hit upon an original scheme to make the first exhibit of the husband's last great picture a success. The painting shows Mozart on his deathbed, his hand lifted as if directing the musician who plays his requiem. As the guests gazed at the illuminated picture in the darkened room the scene portrayed was almost painfully real, but every one felt a superstitious awe as from the pictured harpist's hand the notes of the sad air seemed to flutter. Not until the painter's wife stepped from behind the curtain, revealing two very substantial harpists, was the spell broken. She looked at the tear dimmed eyes of her guests and said smilingly: "It is enough. I wanted to test the power of the picture. A moment more and you would have fancied you heard Mozart speak. Is it not so?"

"German Syrup"

Here is something from Mr. Frank A. Hale, proprietor of the De Witt House, Brunswick, Me. Hotel men meet the world as it comes and goes, and are not slow in sizing people and things up for what they are worth. He says that he has lost a father and several brothers and sisters from Pulmonary Consumption, and is himself frequently troubled with colds, and he often coughs enough to make him sick at his stomach. When ever he has taken a cold of this kind he uses Boschee's German Syrup, and it cures him every time. Here is a man who knows the full danger of lung troubles, and would therefore be most particular as to the medicine he used. What is his opinion? Listen! "I use nothing but Boschee's German Syrup, and have advised, I presume, more than a hundred different persons to take it. They agree with me that it is the best cough syrup in the market."
